Discovering the unique you

Introduction: This is you!

From the sound of your voice to the pattern of your eyes and fingerprints, the evidence that there is only one person like you is undeniable.

Maybe you'd prefer not to be so distinctive, to blend in more easily with your friends. Or perhaps you may be only too glad to change a few things if you could. You might wish to be better at sport, achieve higher grades or have the looks of a movie star. But have you ever considered that it's not only your physical features that make you different?

You have other, more important characteristics that set you apart and make you special. In fact, it is the combination of these characteristics, selected by God, that is your greatest asset. As such, you have a lot more going for you than you may have realized.

From the beginning, even before the day you were born, God has been shaping you and fitting you together exactly as He wanted you to be. He also placed you in the family and country where he wanted you to grow up. Just think, the great God of the universe took time to fit every part of you together perfectly. So don't let anyone tell you that you are just average!

God doesn't mass-produce people. In fact, to show how much He cares about you, He keeps an up-to-date record of the number of hairs on your head. And if God cares enough to keep track of the smallest detail of your life, how much more will He not care about what's going on inside you—the way you feel, what you're thinking and what you believe? He knows what makes you mad, what gives you hope, what makes you laugh and what makes you sad. This is how David put it in one of his psalms:

O LORD, You have searched me and You know me.

You know when I sit and when I rise;

You perceive my thoughts from afar.

You discern my going out and my lying down;

You are familiar with all my ways.

Psalm 139:1-3

Life can be demanding and confusing; and as time goes by, there may be so many questions about the big issues in life that we stop asking questions about our purpose, why we feel the way we do, and why that even matters.

As you read this book, you will hopefully come to realize that you are nothing less than a walking miracle made in God's image—just like Him. That's what gives us purpose and makes us different from all other living beings on earth: God breathed His eternal spirit into man. "The LORD God formed the man from the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and the man became a living being" Genesis 2:7.

First, it is obvious that we have physical bodies. Second, Genesis tells us that we have something equally real inside of us: an eternal spirit that God breathed into us. The soul of a person is the third important part of our make-up. By the time you've read through this book, you should have a clearer understanding of what makes you who you are on the outside and the inside—how one's body, soul, and spirit interact. A simple example shows how easily this interaction takes place.

In the morning, as you wake up, the first thing that makes you aware of yourself is your body, which may be rather reluctant to get up.

As your mind gets itself organized, feelings begin to surface—some barely discernible: a nagging fear, a tinge of sadness, or perhaps a sense of excitement. There may even be a jumble of feelings in your mind, much like a pile of clothes that hasn't been sorted. Within seconds, the soul's thoughts and emotions pick up from where they were put on hold the night before.

Perhaps your thoughts focus on something exciting, or an imminent challenge that makes you aware of your need for God. And so you pause and allow your spirit to reach out to Him in a moment of prayer.

Now you are ready to face the day!

Your body

A perfect creation

God has given us bodies specially designed to live on this planet. From the food provided by nature to the air we breathe; from the force of gravity to the temperature of the sun, our bodies are perfectly suited to thrive on earth.

God created man differently from the way He created other creatures. Up to the creation of man, God had spoken everything into being. At His command, the fish, the birds and all other living creatures were created.

Then God reached down, scooped up some dust and shaped it into a man. God breathed His life into the pile of earth, and Adam became uniquely different to all the other creatures—he had the personal characteristics of his Creator, although in a limited form (Genesis 9:6).

Then God made Adam to fall into a deep sleep, and while he slept, God created a partner for Adam from one of his ribs; someone similar, yet different, who would complement Adam's needs and be a close friend. Together, Adam and Eve could have children, bringing into being offspring, who, like them, would have a spirit within.

God has made our bodies so complex and efficient that even scientists cannot explain some mysteries of the human body. This is what David wrote about his body while God was forming it before he was born: "For You created my inmost being; You knit me together in my mother's womb. I praise You because I am fearfully and wonderfully made; Your works are wonderful, I know that full well" Psalm 139:13-14.

Jars of clay

When we are young, life seems endless, and because there is so much to cram into every day, we barely have time to think of the coming week, let alone eternity. Yet Paul reminds us that life is fragile; that our bodies won't last forever here on earth: "But we have this treasure in jars of clay to show that this all-surpassing power is from God and not from us" 2 Corinthians 4:7.

He compares our bodies to clay jars that get chipped, cracked, and broken. Yet, within every believer there is an everlasting treasure—the Holy Spirit who fills us with the light of God (2 Peter 1:19).

Yes, we are hard pressed on every side, but we are not crushed; we may be confused by the things that happen to us, but we never give up. We may even be struck down physically or emotionally, but the devil can never destroy those who believe in God. Because life is what it is, we do get hurt and bruised and sick, and although the body is designed to heal itself, there are limits to the damage it can repair. That is why God wants us to love our bodies and look after ourselves (Galatians 5:14). Our bodies are His temple—the home of the Holy Spirit. We should therefore not take foolish and unnecessary risks that could lead to permanent injury. Neither should we expose ourselves to that which is unhealthy or habit forming. The Bible warns about excesses—when too much of a good thing becomes a bad thing—because our bodies, with physical limits, are but fragile containers of our lives on earth.

The eye gate and ear gate

We live in a physical world, often referred to as the real world, subtly implying that anything unseen is not real. As mentioned, our physical bodies are perfectly suited for living on earth, but God has a higher purpose for us than to merely exist on this planet for a set number of years. His purpose spans eternity.

We interact with the world through our bodies. It is not surprising, therefore, that the devil uses our two main senses—our eyes and ears—to get as much evil as he can into our hearts. Everything we see and hear enters the mind, and from there it settles in the heart. To make matters worse, every bad thing we see and hear stays lodged in our minds, consciously or subconsciously.

Jesus warned about letting evil enter our lives by what we see. “The eye is the lamp of the body,” He said. “If your eyes are good, your whole body will be full of light. But if your eyes are bad, your whole body will be full of darkness. If then the light within you is darkness, how great is that darkness!” Matthew 6:22-23.

Our interaction with the world

The things we see leave a lasting impression on us as our memories have the capacity to replay them. That’s why we should be careful when selecting movies and TV shows, and wise in our choice of books and magazines.

The other “gate” that leads to our inner lives is the ear gate. Be careful not to leave this gate unguarded by listening to music that stirs up a rebellious attitude, or by being around those who tell dirty jokes. Bad language, blasphemy, and suggestive talk are automatically stored in your memory, and the devil takes every opportunity to use what you’ve heard to taint your heart.

My (big) mouth

We've looked at the two main ways of receiving information, which are through our eyes and ears. Now we look at the most frequent method of conveying a message, and that is, with our mouths.

We speak, whisper, and shout words in a meaningful way to tell someone what we want them to know. The words we choose, and the way we express them, allow us to convey information as well as feelings.

Because words are so powerful, the Bible warns us to guard this gate, too. The mouth can so easily be used to express the bad and hurtful thoughts stored up inside:

“The tongue also is a fire, a world of evil among the parts of the body. It corrupts the whole person, sets the whole course of his life on fire, and is itself set on fire by hell” (James 3:6).

The power of words

Blessings and curses

The heart is the actual source of the good or evil we speak.

Words can bless and encourage, or they can hurt and destroy. It's even possible for praises and cursing to come out of the same mouth, but this should never happen (James 3:9-12).

Yet it's not the mouth that is the real problem. Our mouths simply react to our thoughts, and our thoughts are fed by our hearts.

The heart is, therefore, the actual source of the good or evil we speak. “The good man brings good things out of the good stored up in his heart, and the evil man brings evil things out of the evil stored up in his heart. For out of the overflow of his heart his mouth speaks” Luke 6:45.

Words that save

The mouth has an important part in our salvation. When, at first, we believe in Jesus and realize our desperate need of Him; it is the Holy Spirit who touches our spirit. He is the One who gives us the understanding and faith to believe. But that moment of spiritual insight alone does not ensure a lasting change. We need to respond. It is only when we confess our sins and express our faith in Jesus' saving power that our spirit is reborn and our eternal life begins. "For it is with your heart that you believe and are justified, and it is with your mouth that you confess and are saved" Romans 10:10.

Resisting temptation

Jesus used words (Scripture) to keep Himself from being drawn into the devil's trap of temptation. Yes, Jesus was also tempted, just as we are! Yet, He never sinned once. Jesus quoted Scripture to contest every lie and argument of the devil until the devil finally gave up and left (Luke 4:1-13).

Words of power

Whenever Jesus performed a miracle, He simply spoke, and it happened. At the Sea of Galilee, He commanded the fierce storm to be stilled. Jesus commanded evil spirits to come out of people, and even called to a dead man and raised him back to life! Going back to the beginning of time, we see that God created the whole universe by the words of His mouth—He literally spoke everything into being! God's words still have the same power today to change seemingly impossible situations and make things new.

When we speak words in Jesus' name and believe, those words have the power to bring about His will. Jesus told us as His followers to ask in His name when we pray to the Father, and by doing so, God the Father receives the glory for the answered prayer (John 14:13-14).

Jesus said that if you have faith the size of a mustard seed, you can move mountains!

What is your mountain at this moment?

Words to glorify God

Words can be used to glorify (uplift) God. There are many psalms, like the ones below, in which the writer used his mouth to praise and glorify the Lord:

My mouth is filled with Your praise, declaring Your splendor all day long.

Psalm 71:8

I will extol the LORD at all times;
His praise will always be on my lips.

Psalm 34:1

My tongue will speak of Your righteousness and of Your praises all day long.

Psalm 35:28

Reading a psalm is a great way to start the day, and it doesn't take long. You could mark the Scripture verses where the psalmist glorifies the Lord with his mouth, or you could make up your own psalm of praise.

The struggle for control

When you make an important decision, or you face temptation, do you trust your natural desires to take the lead, or do you allow your spirit to help you do what is right? In other words, does your body or your spirit determine the path you choose?

Our natural desires are usually quick to take charge of a situation by acting instinctively. The body will always assume that it has full control and unlimited rights if it is not guided by the conscience God gave us.

To control our sinful nature, our spirit must be in charge of our body; and that requires our body to be trained. The focus here is not on fitness training but on “denial” training—not letting our body make all the decisions.

As with any training, one can start with basic exercises and build up from there. Our spiritual race is not a sprint but a lifelong marathon that will only end when we see Jesus. Paul said,

“Do you not know that in a RACE all the runners run, but only one gets the prize? Run in such a way as to get the prize. Everyone who competes in the games goes into strict training. They do it to get a crown that will not last; but we do it to get a CROWN that will last forever. Therefore I do not run like a man running aimlessly; I do not fight like a man beating the air. No, I beat my body and make it my slave so that after I have preached to others, I myself will not be disqualified for the prize”

1 Corinthians 9:24-27

The body is wired to satisfy its natural needs and desires. Though many of these are perfectly legitimate, the body must be limited to the boundaries set by God. If not, it will become caught up in Satan’s trap of bad habits and addictions.

Even once we have decided to follow Jesus, our natural desires are still a part of our lives. That is why Jesus said, “If anyone would come after Me, he must deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow Me. For whoever wants to save his life will lose it, but whoever loses his life for Me will save it” Luke 9:23-24.

Denying ourselves means to lay down our selfish desires and be willing to put God’s purposes before our own. This doesn’t mean that we never get to choose the things we enjoy. Jesus came to set us free—not to make us slaves of a cramped lifestyle. Because Jesus sets our spirits free from the grip of sin, that freedom is passed on to the body so that it, too, can enjoy life to the extreme. “It is for freedom that Christ has set us free. Stand firm, then, and do not let yourselves be burdened again by a yoke of slavery” Galatians 5:1.

Denying ourselves may also require us to check our natural desires that compete for priority.

But how do we deny ourselves?

We can keep our bodies disciplined by cutting back on a legitimate need or pleasure for a while. That helps restrain the body’s nagging demands, and it strengthens our willpower.

Daniel, a slave in a foreign country, made a decision not to eat of the royal food offered to him when he was enrolled as a servant to the king. Instead, he asked to be given only vegetables to eat and water to drink. God was pleased with Daniel’s decision and honored him for taking such a stand (Daniel 1).

When we give up rightful pleasures, it won’t go unnoticed. For the Lord who sees the intention of our hearts, takes pleasure in our desire to put Him above our wants and wishes.

A temple for God

From the Outside to the Inside

What we do with our bodies affects who we are on the inside. We can either use our bodies to sin, or we can use our bodies to glorify God.

For the believer, the body is the living place of the Holy Spirit, who is God's presence inside everyone who is born again. When Paul heard that the Christians in Corinth were acting immorally with their bodies, he wrote to them saying, "Do you not know that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit, who is in you, whom you have received from God? You are not your own; you were bought at a price. Therefore honor God with your body" 1 Corinthians 6:19-20.

In Old Testament times (before Jesus came to earth), God would meet with His people in a temple - a beautiful structure where people could go to worship the Lord and bring Him offerings.

Then Jesus came to earth. One day while He was speaking to a woman at a well, the conversation turned to worship. Jesus said to her, "A time is coming and has now come when the true worshipers will worship the Father in spirit and truth, for they are the kind of worshipers the Father seeks" John 4:23.

Jesus was saying that the Holy Spirit would come to live in us and make our bodies the temple of God. We would, therefore, no longer need to go to a specific place to meet with God because He would come and dwell inside us (1 Corinthians 3:16).

The man-made temple of the Old Testament had to be built exactly as God had instructed, with every detail in place (1 Chronicles 28:11-12). There were also many rules regarding the use of the temple so that people would realize that they were meeting with a mighty, holy God.

People had to follow certain rules to make sure they were clean and

We belong to Jesus totally.

We are not our

have been bought

acceptable to God. Only priests were allowed in the sacred part of the temple, and only the High Priest was allowed into the very holy part of the temple to meet with God once a year. God has not changed—He was, and will always be, perfect and holy. And so, if God through His Spirit comes to live in us, surely we must honor Him by the way we live.

Due to our sinfulness, the devil became our master and took ownership of all that we are and all that we possess. We literally became his slaves. But thank God, the moment we ask Jesus to save us, He not only rescues our spirits from death, He buys back every part of us. When Jesus died for us, He gave up His body, soul, and spirit in order to rescue every part of our being from the devil's grip (Hebrews 7:25). Therefore, we belong to Jesus totally. We are not our own—we have been bought with a price.

That means,

1. we should look after the bodies God entrusted to us. We must care for them, eating healthily, keeping in shape, and staying away from things that harm us.
2. we should guard against temptations that enter through our physical senses, while also being careful with our actions. "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that each one may receive what is due him for the things done while in the body, whether good or bad" 2 Corinthians 5:10.

The body's actions affect the spirit. Here are some examples:

- With our bodies, we are able to serve others practically and receive a spiritual blessing (Matthew 10:42).
- The body is the dwelling of the Holy Spirit. When we sin with our bodies, we grieve the Holy Spirit (1 Corinthians 6:19).
- The sinful deeds of our bodies lead to spiritual death (Romans 7:5).

From the Inside to the Outside

A close relationship with the Lord energizes us emotionally and sustains us physically. The power released within our spirits is like a spring of water that revives our entire being.

“He gives strength to the weary and increases the power of the weak. Even youths grow tired and weary, and young men stumble and fall; but those who hope in the LORD will renew their strength. They will soar on wings like eagles; they will run and not grow weary, they will walk and not be faint” Isaiah 40:29-31.

One day, when Jesus' disciples had gone into town to buy food, Jesus stayed at a water pit in order to meet with a woman who had a spiritual need. When the disciples got back, they encouraged Jesus to eat some of the food they had bought.

But Jesus replied, “My food is to do the will of Him who sent Me and to finish His work” John 4:34.

At times, Jesus would go without food or sleep in order to help someone or to pray, yet He never lacked the physical strength for each day's task. Of course, Jesus ate and slept just as His disciples did in order to sustain His physical body, but Jesus stuck to His priorities: to glorify His Father and show His love to humankind.

We know that when someone is excited, they are energized; and if that is the effect our mental outlook has on our physical energy, how much more will our relationship with the Lord provide us with motivation and drive?

When we spend time with someone who loves us, who shares our problems, who sees the potential in us and motivates us to be our best, it is so much easier to keep going.

That's why God has given us a specific day of the week on which to rest and spend time with Him—a day to recharge our physical and spiritual “batteries.” However, one day a week with the Lord is not enough to keep us connected to His power all week.

Even Paul, living at the slower pace of biblical times, drew his energy and joy from the Lord: “To this end I labor, struggling with all His energy, which so powerfully works in me” Colossians 1:29. Paul got his power by staying connected to God at all times. He said, “Be joyful always; pray continually” 1 Thessalonians 5:16. Joy and prayer go hand in hand. The inner joy that stirs you up and keeps you going only fills you as you stay in touch with the One who created you and knows you best.

God's temple—first impressions

To show your respect for the Holy Spirit that lives inside you, it is important to dress modestly. Whether you dress funky, casual, smart, sloppy, weird or plain, that's up to you. But remember that people's perceptions are formed by what they see.

So wear what you feel comfortable in and what is acceptable in the company of those you are with. Remember, though, that you are not your own—you belong to God (1 Corinthians 6:20), and honoring God with your body includes the clothes you wear.

Your soul

Beneath the surface

One seldom hears people mention the soul in everyday conversation, except perhaps when using an expression like "bless my soul." But where is the soul and what is it for?

Unlike animals, we have an awareness of God's moral standard imprinted on us from birth, namely, our conscience (Romans 2:14). As such, we don't just exist as a part of nature's cycle of life on earth. Our lives have a higher purpose: to bring pleasure to God and to prepare us for our eternal destiny.

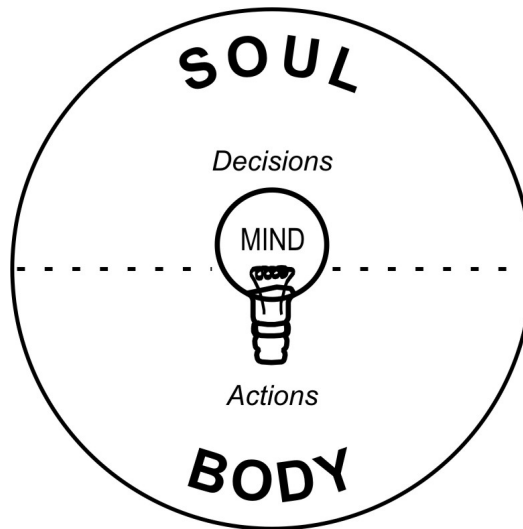

The soul is the center of who we are—our temperament, our character, our thoughts, our feelings and our will. It is the part that makes us aware of ourselves and what is right and wrong.

The soul is the core of our humanness. It is not our body, nor is it our spirit, yet it is bound to both. Consider the verse in Luke 2:35, where Simeon prophesied that Mary's soul would be pierced with a sword (the indescribable grief of seeing her Son die on a cross).

The mind The heart The will

The brain is the central hub of the body, with every part connected to it by a network of nerves. It is the body's process and control center.

The process part is where you think about things and make decisions. The control part is where those decisions are put into action. Simply put, that is the physical function of the brain.

However, the mind—the inner you—is where your values and opinions are formed.

These private thoughts—soul conversations—help you to work through the issues of life. An example from the Bible is where the psalmist thinks about the past, reasons with himself, and then pictures the way things will turn out: “These things I remember as I pour out my soul ... Why are you downcast, O my soul? Why so disturbed within me? Put your hope in God, for I will yet praise Him, my Savior and my God” Psalm 42:4-5.

Even though the psalmist is far from his usual place of worship, his spirit encourages his troubled soul to hope in God. By reasoning with himself, the psalmist begins to recognize that God is bigger than his present circumstances. Suddenly the light comes on and his newfound perspective leads to hope in God, his Savior.

But what is the soul?

The mind The heart The will

Feelings may be played down by those who are more focused on the physical aspects of life. The reality is, though, that our emotions form an integral part of our lives.

Feelings keep us human. They show up our flaws when we handle situations badly, and make us vulnerable when they expose our guarded hearts.

Though unseen, feelings are powerful enough to affect us physically. Think of a situation where something terrible happened and you were to blame. Your mouth probably dried up and your stomach tightened into a knot.

The physical effects from feelings such as guilt, anger, fear, and love show how the brain sends a message to the body, which responds with reactions such as a quickening heartbeat.

Are emotions good or bad?

Like the five physical senses of the body, God has also equipped our souls with emotional sensors. These help us to act appropriately in "Positive"

emotions
motivate and uplift us;
"negative"
emotions

our relationships. They also serve as spiritual feelers.

Emotions are usually an indication that some action is necessary, or perhaps a shift in our attitude. They are therefore neither good nor bad in themselves, but influence us for better or worse by the effect they have on us. For example, anger can compel a man to protect a child from being mistreated, or anger can get him to react wrongly by losing his temper at work.

"Positive" emotions motivate and uplift us; "negative" emotions drain our energy. When emotions such as jealousy and bitterness are not dealt with quickly and appropriately, they lose their value as warnings of our sinful thoughts and become part of the problem. Emotions such as guilt become a heavy burden, and anger like burning coals in the heart.

Inner turmoil, if left unresolved, makes it increasingly difficult to determine the initial trigger, and so the clutter of bad emotions clouds the real problem.

Emotional baggage not only wears us down but also stunts our relationships and distorts our view of life. In short, emotions that are left to deteriorate result in a negative attitude to life; while emotions that are used to strengthen relationships lead to a healthy outlook on life.

Moods

Moods reveals our underlying emotions, sometimes without us realizing it. They affect the way we act, and the way we act affects our relationship with others.

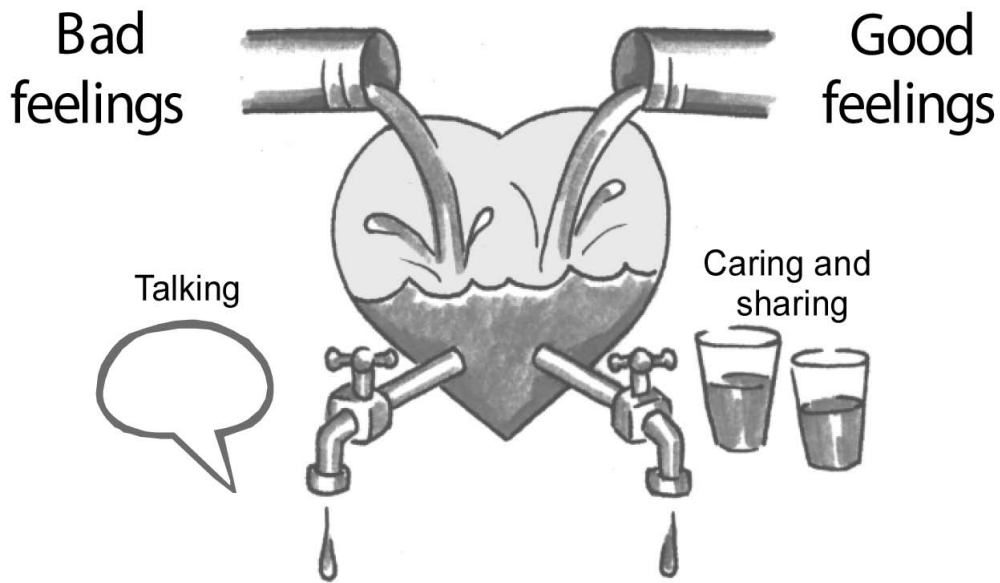

While we should be careful how our words and body language convey our discontent, simply pretending that all is well is not the answer.

We should aim to express our feelings in a restrained way so that others will realize how we feel and what made us feel that way. Then it won't seem as if we're in combat with everything that moves. Our friends and family may make allowances when we have a 'blue day,' and perhaps even be sympathetic; but if we snap at people without them knowing the reason, they'll simply snap back or avoid us. Either way, it won't make us feel any better.

Your mood depends largely on what happens around you or to you.

A strong feeling can flood your soul in an instant and take days to subside. When there is a constant inflow of bad feelings with no outlet, one can easily be swamped with a sense of hopelessness. Trying to control circumstances and the feelings they cause is like trying to hold back a powerful surge of water. In other words, one has little or no control over the cause and intensity of one's feelings, and so it is better to focus on opening safe outlets through which stored-up emotions are released.

Some try to counter negative emotions by going after fleeting pleasures. But that only provides a distraction at best. Strong negative feelings cannot be effectively neutralized by simply "adding positive feelings." If anything, the churn of conflicting emotions only causes greater turmoil. It is far better to allow negative feelings to be released constructively.

Note that negative feelings have a purpose: they become a driving force that requires you to deal with the cause of your troubled heart.

To stay emotionally healthy, good and bad feelings need feelings to flow. Good feelings can be channeled to areas that make you more productive, creative, and caring. Bad feelings can be released by sharing the problem and so gain perspective, by forgiving the person who hurt you, and by accepting that life isn't perfect.

Once you have found an emotional outlet, don't let it get all clogged up with ongoing resentment.

Do not repay evil with evil or insult with insult, but with blessing, because to this you were called so that you may inherit a blessing.

1 Peter 3:9

Let go of the negative feelings you may be holding on to, and move on. Those feelings are probably legitimate and completely understandable, but release them, or they will hold you back (Psalm 37:8).

Relationships and emotions

Emotions play an important role in forming and strengthening our relationship with others and with God. Emotions are at the core of what potentially brings us closer together or pushes us apart.

From love and affection on one side to hatred and intolerance on the other, emotions affect the way that people relate to each other. Fear, anger, sadness, guilt, jealousy, love and joy arise from our interaction with others. These emotions are experienced with varying intensity, determined largely by the circumstances that brought them about and, to some extent, one's temperament.

Just as our bodies enjoy satisfying sensations, close relationships can help our souls experience uplifting feelings that provide a sense of self-worth and completeness.

On the other hand, just as our bodies feel pain in order to keep us from carelessly hurting ourselves, our souls experience emotional sensitivity in order to avoid that which could ruin our inner being. Like physical pain, we instinctively react to emotional pain by either confronting the source or by evading it, if possible. Enduring the pain is seldom an option. Where there is indifference, this could be a sign of emotional numbness or detachment.

Respecting others

If you know what it feels like to have your toes stepped on, you can almost feel the pain when you see someone else get hurt. Similarly, a person who has experienced rejection understands what it feels like to be ridiculed. In order to value and protect relationships, Jesus has given us a simple but important rule by which to live: “Do to others as you would have them do to you” Luke 6:31. Realizing what it must feel like to be taunted may get us to think twice before saying and doing things that break others down.

Reaching out

Our own hurts and disappointments can help us become more caring toward others as our feelings motivate us to action: reaching out a helping hand, listening, and being there for someone who needs us. By supporting people with physical and emotional needs, we encourage new friendships and maintain our relationship network.

Resisting provocation

Bullying has become increasingly subtle as technology enables bullies to remain anonymous and distant. If you are a victim of such a cowardly action, you have an inner protection—your sense of self-worth that deflects the penetrating damage of the sniper’s shot.

Self-worth should not be mistaken for pride (who we are in our own eyes), but based on your worth in the eyes of Jesus.

The Creator who made you sees you as beautiful and glorious, and that is what you are (Psalm 8:4-5). And if Jesus, the King, values you so much that He gave His life for you, why care what others think?

The mind The heart The will

Our will is determined by the choices we make when facing alternatives. If we have a disciplined will, we have power over our emotions and actions. Yet, how often our will follows the well-worn channels formed by our sinful nature, and our selfish attitude leads to a selfish decisions.

Instinctive reactions

Every day, we find ourselves in situations where our reaction is automatic, and because we don't actually weigh up our options, our will is not involved.

If someone throws an apple at you, you might duck or catch it without thinking. We are born with reflexes that help us evade harmful situations. As we grow up, we can train our reflexes to respond faster and more precisely to certain conditions, as in a game of sport.

Our will, however, is what we want and what we choose. It is the result of a conscious thought process.

The process of making a decision

When making a decision, your mind processes information like a computer and retrieves relevant details from your memory. In addition, your emotions add a 'human touch' to your logical reasoning. Your personality aligns your decision with your temperament. And most importantly, your spirit plays its role through your conscience and sensitivity toward God.

Suppose you're looking to buy a pair of shoes that you need for a special occasion. After a long search, you find the perfect pair marked down to half-price. Unfortunately, the assistant tells you that the shoes you want are not available in your size. For a moment, you consider taking the smaller size, hoping that they'll stretch. But you recall having made that mistake before.

Annoyed, you consider trying other shops or buying a different pair. On the one hand, your impulsive nature is prompting you to buy a more expensive pair and pay it off later. On the other hand, you realize that God may be teaching you patience.

In this way, the combined input from your memory, your emotions, your personality, and your spirit hopefully leads to a good decision.

A weak will

A person with a weak will is someone who is influenced or persuaded easily and who generally takes the easy way out. Samson is an example of a weak-willed person who was, ironically, a physical champ. He had everything going for him, but threw it all away. When he finally did come to his senses, his desperate attempt to fulfill his mission cost him his life.

God had given Samson supernatural strength to rid the land of the heathen Philistines. But Samson failed to focus on what God wanted him to do and started to flirt with a Philistine woman who secretly set out to destroy him. When he was finally captured and humiliated by the Philistines, he prayed a final prayer, saying: “Let me die with the Philistines!” (Judges 16:30). Then he pushed with all his might against the pillars on either side of him and brought down the temple on all the people gathered there.

Samson’s weak will caused him to dishonor his parents, compromise his mission, and disobey God.

A strong will

A person with a strong will has a set way of thinking and is not easily swayed.

While a strong will may have its drawbacks, it can be a good thing depending on the situation. Consider the strong-willed apostle Paul who went from persecuting Christians to actually becoming one.

At first, Saul—a man of influence—was determined to destroy Christianity. He not only hated Christians, he persecuted them. After his encounter with Jesus, Saul (also named to Paul) became one of the greatest missionaries the world has ever known. He started many churches in countries where the gospel had never been preached and wrote much of the New Testament.

Near the end of his life, he wrote these words in a letter to the Philippians: “Forgetting what is behind and straining toward what is ahead, I press on toward the goal to win the prize for which God has called me heavenward in Christ Jesus” Philippians 3:13-14.

A God-controlled will

Whether you are someone who is happy-go-lucky, compliant, or determined, the problem we all face is the conflict in our hearts between our will and God’s will—wanting our way or letting God have His way in our lives (Romans 8:5).

One might assume that Jesus, being God, wouldn’t need to check with His Father about His daily activities. Yet while on earth, Jesus said and did only the things His heavenly Father wanted Him to: “For I have come down from heaven not to do My will but to do the will of Him who sent Me” (John 6:38, also see John 8:28).

Jesus made it clear that His primary goal was to do the will of His Father; and it should be ours, too, regardless of our temperament or mood.

From values to action

Values

Everything we say and do—whether planned or unplanned—is a reflection of who we are on the inside. Deep down at the core of who we are, our values form the long-term principles, ambitions, and beliefs that are important to us.

For example, it may be one’s family, a career, or a certain cause. These values are personal and may be shaped over time by one’s upbringing, influential people, or by life-changing experiences.

Values are shaped through the interaction of the heart, mind, and will. The heart is the motivator; the mind uses its storehouse of memories and facts; the will is the driving force that leads to action.

A value could be defined as that which ...

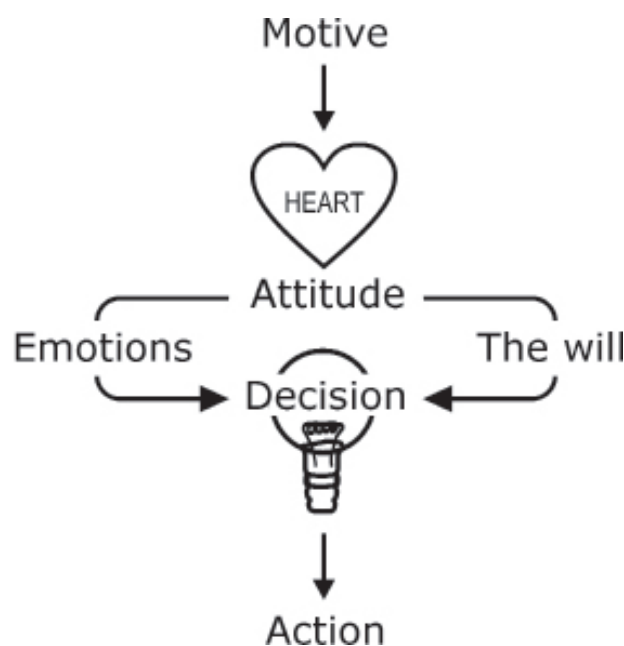

- gives meaning to your life
- takes priority
- inspires and motivates you
- influences your decisions
- makes you take a stand
- defines your character.

Motives

Our motives, based on our values, determine how we interact with others.

Motives come from the heart and are therefore swayed by who or what controls the heart. Something, someone, or the Lord through the Holy Spirit, has an influence on why we do certain things.

Our motives may be hidden from the outside world, but the Lord knows our every intention (1 Corinthians 4:5). Even so, He tests our hearts to uncover our motives and give us the opportunity to prove our true intentions.

Although the test can be painful, humbling, and confusing, it can help us learn and grow if we respond in the right way.

The Israelites had to travel through a hot, barren desert to receive their reward—the Promised Land. Moses explained the reason for their desert experience, saying; “Remember how the LORD your God led you all the way in the desert these forty years, to humble you and to test you in order to know what was in your heart, whether or not you would keep His commands” Deuteronomy 8:2.

The book of Job tells the story of a man whom Satan accused of serving God for selfish reasons (Job 1:6-11). To prove Satan wrong, the Lord allowed him to test Job, and although Job lost all he had, including his health, he remained true to God. After Job’s test, God blessed him with twice as much as he had at first. Satan’s scheme had backfired!

Sometimes, the Lord’s ways make no sense on a human level, for God’s thoughts are not our thoughts, neither are our ways His ways (Isaiah 55:8). An example, though extreme, is where God instructed Abraham to lay his son on an altar and sacrifice him. Surely, this was too much to ask! This went against all that Abraham believed about God and the promise He had made. (But it was only a test, and God did not intend for Isaac to be killed.) When God saw that Abraham was obedient and willing to go all the way in faith, the angel of the Lord called out to him, “Do not lay a hand on the boy. Do not do anything to him. Now I know that you fear God, because you have not withheld from Me your son, your only son” Genesis 22:12. Abraham’s reward for his obedience and trust—even when things didn’t make sense—was that God blessed his descendants and made them as numerous as the stars in the sky.

When tested, Abraham had a choice—Job didn’t. In fact, Job didn’t even know what was happening, neither could he see the bigger picture of what God was doing. He probably struggled with the same questions you may have.

Why does God need to test us at all? Surely, He knows our thoughts and motives and knows how we would respond in any situation. While that is true, the Lord is fair and gives us a chance to prove our faithfulness in whatever way He chooses to test us. It may be...

- by allowing us to struggle with moral or ethical issues: “I know, my God, that You test the heart and are pleased with integrity. All these things have I given willingly and with honest intent” 1 Chronicles 29:17.
- to give us an opportunity to do good: “For the LORD searches every heart and understands every motive behind the thoughts” (1 Chronicles 28:9).
- to see what motivates us—what is important to us: “When you ask, you do not receive, because you ask with wrong motives, that you may spend what you get on your pleasures” James 4:3.

Our motives give birth to our attitudes; and through our interaction with others, our attitudes reveal where our priorities lie.

Attitudes

Paul, in his letter to the Philippians, said that our attitudes should be the same as that of Jesus, who, being in very nature God, did not think of Himself as being equal with God, but made Himself nothing by taking on the nature of a servant (Philippians 2:5-7).

Jesus is our perfect example. He not only taught us about having the right attitude, He lived what He taught. Matthew chapter 5 to 7, shows how Jesus raised the standard of a godly lifestyle way above that of the religious leaders of that time, yet He made living a holy life so practical that anyone could follow His example.

So how do we know whether our attitudes measure up to God’s standard? We can ask Him to examine our thoughts and show us how we shape up. That's what the psalmist did when he prayed, "Test me, O LORD, and try me, examine my heart and my mind" Psalm 26:2.

If you pray this prayer, chances are that God will make you aware of your attitude through everyday situations. You may be relieved to know that the results of the test are between you and God. He doesn't compare you to others. Neither should you, lest you become proud of your success or discouraged by your failure.

God has a growth plan for each of us, and every believer is at a different stage in their growth. Once we understand this, our relationship with the Lord is no longer based on competition but on seeking His approval.

In God's time, we will all get there: "He knows the way that I take; when He has tested me, I will come forth as gold" Job 23:10. As God's purifying heat is applied to our lives through difficulties, the things that are weak and worthless burn up, leaving us stronger and purer.

"He knows
the way that I take;
when He has tested
me, I will come forth
as gold."
Job 23:10

Having the right attitude toward everyone seems impossible on a human level, and it is. For our attitude to be like that of Jesus takes more than just a smile and trying to be nice. Unless God's love fills our hearts, we can never hope to get it right because it is there, in our hearts, that our attitude is formed. It is only when our hearts are in tune with God's Spirit that pleasing Him becomes as natural as breathing (Ephesians 3:16-19).

For us to see how a spiritual lifestyle is lived out practically, we should study the life of Jesus and learn from the way He handled real-life situations. Read about the life of Jesus in the Gospels: Matthew,

Mark, Luke and John. In short, when faced with a tough situation, we should ask ourselves what Jesus would do.

The Bible highlights the significance of our attitude because it is the basis on which we make decisions.

Decisions

There is one decision that stands out above all others in life; the one that determines where we will spend eternity. After that, other important decisions follow, such as those affecting our lives and relationships.

Depending on our temperament and upbringing, we either make decisions by considering all the pros and cons or by following our hearts. One's preferred method of decision-making is not as important as the basis on which those decisions are made.

If we live by the principles of the Bible and allow the Holy Spirit to guide us, He helps us make good decisions that please God.

In Luke 14:28-33, Jesus appeals to the calculating type, urging them to count the cost before making a commitment to follow Him: "Suppose one of you wants to build a tower. Will he not first sit down and estimate the cost to see if he has enough money to complete it? In the same way, any of you who does not give up everything he has cannot be My disciple."

Meanwhile, Paul tells us to give freely—not counting the cost—but letting our hearts guide us: "Each man should give what he has decided in his heart to give, not reluctantly or under compulsion, for God loves a cheerful giver" 2 Corinthians 9:7.

Whether we use our heart or our mind to make a decision depends on the issue being considered. Yet, even 'small' decisions should not be underestimated because they are the foundation stones of the bigger, more important decisions you make.

Common sense or divine guidance?

When making a decision, Christians sometimes struggle to know when to seek God's guidance and when to trust their God-given reasoning. Although there is no simple formula that fits every situation, the following guidelines may be useful:

- Decisions that form part of normal everyday life can be made spontaneously, as God has given us the freedom to choose; and as Christians, we have the added benefit of having the mind of Christ, giving us greater insight (1 Corinthians 2:16).
- Decisions that affect others and those that have long-term consequences should be made carefully and prayerfully.
- Decisions that have moral implications should be made on the basis of God's Word; and where the Bible is not specific, decisions should be made with a clear conscience. As we allow the Word of God to fill our minds, the wisdom of God will fill our hearts. "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly as you teach and admonish one another with all wisdom" Colossians 3:16.

A c t i o n s

What we do makes us who we are. Our actions define our character and determine the moral direction our lives will take.

In other words,

- our actions either build our character or break it down, and
- our actions have consequences that plot the course of our lives.

From childhood, our actions reveal who we are on the inside. "Even a child is known by his actions, by whether his conduct is pure and right” Proverbs 20:11. Without temptations, problems, and imperfect people to provoke us, we would never detect our hidden, sinful motives or recognize the need for Jesus to change us (Romans 7:7, 13).

Our actions are, therefore, the visible display of our hidden motives. If you want to find out how you shape up in this area, don’t compare yourself against the standard set by others, but measure your progress by the standard set for us in the Bible: “Each one should test his own actions. Then he can take pride in himself, without comparing himself to somebody else” Galatians 6:4.

We are often not aware of our true motives until we are faced with a situation where our feelings suddenly surface. It may be a jab of jealousy as a close friend suddenly becomes more popular; or perhaps pride, when you’re suddenly seen as a hero.

Since we don’t have direct control over the way we feel, we are not judged by our feelings—we are judged by what we do (Genesis 4:6-7 and 1 John 3:7). By making a decision to do what is right—and actually doing it—we overpower the feelings that so often keep us from being our best.

Our actions can even change the way we feel. When we do something kind for someone we don’t like, the outcome may be surprising.

Finally, every action has lasting results—it bears fruit (good or bad), and it’s by the kind of fruit you bear that others will see your heart (Matthew 7:16-20).

Your spirit

The center of who we are

Your spirit is the part of you that will always be. In a thousand years or ten thousand years from now, you will still exist. So instead of thinking of yourself as a person who has a spirit, you could think of yourself as a spiritual being with a body that serves as a temporary covering.

As mentioned in the first chapter, what makes us different from all other creatures is that we have a spirit. God breathed His eternal life into Adam, and for a short time before Adam sinned, he was destined to live forever with a perfect body in a perfect world. But Adam's disobedience brought death and decay to the whole world: "Sin entered the world through one man, and death through sin, and in this way death came to all men, because all sinned" Romans 5:12.

God had said to Adam, "You must not eat from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, for when you eat of it you will surely die" Genesis 2:17. The moment Adam disobeyed, his spirit died; and although his body didn't die straight away, an aging process triggered the countdown of his life on earth.

From that day on, Adam no longer enjoyed a close relationship with his Creator. He became aware of evil and discovered what guilt feels like. His guilt made him so ashamed and afraid that he tried to hide when he heard the Lord God in the garden.

Adam's sin not only separated him from God's presence, his "sin disease" was passed down to all humankind and has separated us from God too (Isaiah 59:2).

Because our spirit cannot live in isolation—separate from the Creator—our spirit is dead. It is cut off from the Sustainer of Life. But while we were still dead in our sin, God sent Jesus to earth to die for us so that we (our spirits) can be made alive to God. "For Christ died for sins once for all, the righteous for the unrighteous, to bring you to God. He was put to death in the body but made alive by the Spirit" 1 Peter 3:18.

God sent Jesus to earth to die for us so that we (our spirits)
can be made alive
to God.

God's love for us is so great that He wants to have a close relationship with us, like He did with Adam before it all went wrong. However, because God is holy, He cannot live in a sinful heart. The only way God's Spirit can come and live in us is if we are completely sinless.

When Jesus died on the cross, He took the whole world's sin, and the punishment for that sin on Him—as if He had sinned.

"He was pierced for our transgressions, He was crushed for our iniquities; the punishment that brought us peace was upon Him, and by His wounds we are healed" Isaiah 53:5.

God gives us the choice of receiving His forgiveness and being made completely sinless, or being judged for the sin that has permeated everything we are.

A new spirit

Your spirit is dead in sin or alive to God—the responsibility for that choice lies with each person (Deuteronomy 30:15-19).

One evening, a religious man named Nicodemus went to Jesus to find out whether he was on the right track regarding his religious belief. Jesus got straight to the point and said to him, “You must be born again” John 3:7.

Totally confused, Nicodemus asked, “How can an old man like me be born again?” Jesus, however, was not speaking about his body being born again, but about his spirit.

When we believe in Jesus and trust Him to save us, He puts a new spirit in us—a spirit that lives forever. From the moment Jesus makes us new inside, eternal life begins! That is the reason Jesus came to earth: “For God so loved the world that He gave His one and only Son, that whoever believes in Him shall not perish but have eternal life. For God did not send His Son into the world to condemn the world, but to save the world through Him” John 3:16-17.

It depends on one's heart condition

Within the soul

The heart is the place where we sense emotions such as sadness, guilt, and anger. An example can be found in Proverbs 12:25: “An anxious heart weighs a man down, but a kind word cheers him up.” Many other Bible verses also link emotions like envy, joy, love, and peace with the heart.

The heart is also the center of one's being, where the things that are important and precious to us are prioritized. Jesus said that where our treasure is, there our heart will be also (Luke 12:34).

Within the spirit

Within the spirit of an unbeliever, the heart is the place where unforgiven sin lies and where it can spread like a virus until it threatens even the potential good—the desire to seek God and follow His ways.

The good news is that there is a cure for the sin within us. By God's grace, the heart can be cleansed of all sin and made completely pure. God says,

I will give you a new heart and put a new spirit in you; I will remove from you your heart of stone and give you a heart of flesh.

Ezekiel 36:26

The heart is like a spring that flows over with whatever is inside. That's how one can tell the condition of a person's heart.

Jesus said, "The good man brings good things out of the good stored up in his heart, and the evil man brings evil things out of the evil stored up in his heart" Luke 6:45.

Eternity is in the heart

There is a part of us that lives forever; but for now, it is a seed within a shell (our body). Ecclesiastes 3:11 tells us that God has set eternity in the hearts of men; not our physical hearts, which supply blood to the body, but our spiritual hearts with which we respond to God.

It is only when we die that our outer “shell” is cast off, setting free the seed of everlasting life that God planted in us from the beginning.

Eternity is in the heart of every person, but for those who reject God, it is not eternal life. It is, in fact, eternal death: a state of complete consciousness but separated from God—an unimaginably dark, lonely, scary way to spend eternity.

But for those who are born again, the new spirit within becomes an imperishable seed—one that will sprout into everlasting life with God, as He promised in His Word: “For you have been born again, not of perishable seed, but of imperishable, through the living and enduring word of God” 1 Peter 1:23.

Recognized by your fruit

A fruit tree is not planted for its shade or beauty, but for its fruit. Similarly, God has not placed us on earth merely to fill up our little space, but to bear fruit. “For we are God’s workmanship, created in Christ Jesus to do good works, which God prepared in advance for us to do” Ephesians 2:10. You have life and you have a purpose; living out that purpose is bearing fruit.

There is a similarity between trees and weeds: they both grow from seeds. But that’s where the similarity ends. Weeds are useless. “People do not pick figs from thornbushes, or grapes from briars” Luke 6:44. Jesus’ statement implies that unless we have His seed of new life in us, our efforts on earth are short-lived at best and have no eternal value.

It is only through Him that our God-given task can develop into eternal fruit. Jesus said, “You did not choose Me, but I chose you and appointed you to go and bear fruit—fruit that will last” John 15:16.

What is this peculiar fruit that we should bear, and how do we recognize it in ourselves?

The fruit of the Spirit

The fruit in a Christian’s life ought to be as obvious as the fruit on a tree. With our lives rooted in Jesus, our fruit results from the Spirit’s work in us and through us. Spiritual fruit is the evidence of a changed lifestyle, and though not edible, it should be noticeable. “The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness and self-control” Galatians 5:22-23.

While our varied temperaments make some virtues listed in Galatians easier to live out than others, each is an important part of every Christian’s life. It is not up to us to choose the fruit we would like to

"You did not choose
Me, but I chose you
and appointed you to go and bear fruit - fruit that will last."

John 15:16

bear because we are not the ones producing the fruit. The Holy Spirit produces the fruit in us.

That is why it is called the fruit of the Spirit, which grows and ripens in our souls and becomes a harvest of blessing through our actions. In practical terms, we are the Spirit's hands and feet here on earth.

Pruning for growth

For those unfamiliar with horticulture, pruning seems counterproductive—one cuts back perfectly good branches that have the potential to bear fruit. So why would a farmer or gardener prune a tree year after year instead of letting it grow as big as possible? The reason is simple: the tree's seasonal growth either supports the growth of wood and leaves, or if it is limited by pruning, flows into buds to produce a harvest of juicy fruit.

Jesus said to His followers, "I am the true vine, and My Father is the gardener. He cuts off every branch in Me that bears no fruit, while every branch that does bear fruit He prunes so that it will be even more fruitful" John 15:1-2.

Each of us is connected to Jesus, the Vine. We are part of Him as He is part of us (John 15:4-5), but when we grow in a direction where we are not absorbing God's light, or if we grow too big and bushy, we need to be pruned. In Jesus' analogy, the gardener even prunes branches that are already bearing fruit, meaning that we can all expect to be pruned from time to time.

But what kinds of things does God cut from our lives, and does it hurt? The Lord uses everyday situations to bring hidden sins, such as disobedience and pride, to the surface so that they can be dealt with. For example, if you've lashed out at someone but you go back and make things right, some pruning has taken place.

When you are humbled by an embarrassing incident, pride is cut down. Situations like these may be unpleasant, and dealing with our natural reactions are a challenge; but if we are willing to change, the Holy Spirit can even use our shortcomings for good.

Though pruning may be painful or uncomfortable, there are no lasting wounds; and the quicker we respond, the less there is to cut.

Stunting growth is not the same as pruning, though. In nature, growth is stunted by drought, disease, or damage. Spiritually, our growth is stunted when sin restricts God's flow of blessing through us, and so our sin limits our fruitfulness.

Now you must rid yourselves of all such things as these: anger, rage, malice, slander, and filthy language from your lips. Do not lie to each other, since you have taken off your old self with its practices and have put on the new self, which is being renewed in knowledge in the image of its Creator.

Colossians 3:8-10

What makes you special?

Fitting the pieces together

Besides your physical features, other important virtues set you apart as an individual. Although your friends may be similar to you in some ways, it is the combination of your virtues that makes you unique.

Your talents, your personality, your spiritual gifts, and your past are like pieces of a mosaic, each with the perfect color and shape to complete the beautiful picture of your life.

Your talents -virtues of the body

Talents and skills are the abilities we have to use our hands, minds, voices, and bodies in a special way.

Each of us is born with certain talents—things we are good at and find easier to do than others would.

Some talents may be passed on to us by our parents. They form part of the physical characteristics (likeness) we inherit from them. We should remember that, although our talents may seem like natural abilities, they are given to us by the Lord.

We read in the first few verses of Exodus 31 that God filled people with His Spirit and with the skills, ability, and knowledge to do specific tasks.

Accepting
the way
God has made you is the key to unlocking your full potential.

Our abilities improve as we grow up and develop them through coaching and practice. Talents, which are as varied as the individual, include a flair for sport, music, art, technology, languages, numbers, communication, and a variety of others.

Sometimes, people don't even realize that they have a special ability until they discover something they do well or simply like doing.

Have you discovered your talents yet? Who knows what "hidden" talents are waiting to be discovered?

God, through His Spirit, blesses every talent that is yielded to Him, and radically changes all who let Him have His way in their lives. “The Spirit of the LORD will come upon you in power, and you will be changed into a different person. Once these signs are fulfilled, do whatever your hand finds to do, for God is with you” 1 Samuel 10:6-7.

Focusing on your strengths

What are you good at, not compared to others, but considering the different things you do well and enjoy? Whatever they may be, those are your talents. Work on them!

Being even slightly better than average at two or more things opens up a world of opportunities. For example, a person who is good at writing as well as focussed on detail would make a talented journalist. Another person who may also be good at writing but is more creative would probably do better at writing a novel or a script for a play.

Once you have identified your strengths, think of ways to combine your talents to enrich your life and bring glory to God.

Your personality - virtues of the soul

Just as your body is unique, so is your personality. Even though it cannot be seen, it shows a distinctive pattern, like a fingerprint, by the way you act (or react) in various situations.

You were born with a basic personality carefully designed by God to suit His purpose for your life.

Over time, it has been shaped by people close to you and by your life experiences. Sad and hurtful incidents, joys and thrills, successes and failures—all become woven into your personality.

Don't stay trapped in a place that others, your circumstances, and your sinful nature have determined. You can learn to master negative personality traits by finding acceptable ways to deal with them. So, if you are quick-tempered, your personality cannot be an excuse for constant outbursts.

You can manage aspects of your personality by deciding how you'll respond when faced with a challenge. And you will surely get many opportunities to practice.

It is important to realize that no particular personality type is the ideal or perfect one. So if you're a quiet person, you shouldn't let someone with a forceful personality make you feel inferior. Remember, you have other strengths! And don't copy others in order to become like them, because the person you're trying to imitate isn't who you really are.

You will only become frustrated. Besides, a different personality won't make you more perfect.

Consider the disciples who were carefully handpicked by Jesus. Were they perfect? No. Yet each one was chosen for a specific reason, and as such, they made their unique contribution to the team.

Does that mean we should accept the way we are and never step outside our comfort zones? No, our personalities should keep growing toward full maturity, and for that to happen, we must embrace change and challenges.

Personality weaknesses

Each personality type has certain constraints. A quiet teenager who is hardly noticed might long to be a natural leader. An impulsive girl may wish she were better at thinking through her options before acting. Some may cringe at the thought of making a speech in front of a large audience, while for others, it is a stimulating experience.

It takes courage and effort to attempt those things that don't come naturally. The spin-off is that as we deal with our shortcomings, we develop character—something we're not born with. By improving the weaker aspects of our personality and accepting those we cannot change, we grow in patience, endurance, humility, and the acceptance of others. Building up these qualities takes determination, yet those who overcome their weaknesses end up stronger than the rest.

Embracing the personality God has given you makes it easier to get along with others and accept their distinctiveness. That is why Jesus said we should love others as we love [accept] ourselves (Matthew 22:39).

Personality strengths

Each personality type also has certain strengths. Because these become woven naturally into every aspect of your life, they are often overlooked as being valuable assets.

Accepting yourself the way God made you is the key to unlocking your full potential. A key's notches are cut at different levels to match a specific lock. The pattern of highs and lows are like different aspects of your personality. If the notches are not at the precise levels, the key is useless. Someone with a different personality cannot unlock the doors you can. God has no duplicates. There is only one person like you.

You have the precise personality combination He needs in order to open certain doors.

Personality and character

Personality should never be confused with character. Our personality is part of our make-up. Our character is shaped by our behavior. Character displays honesty, loyalty, and perseverance in the face of trials and obstacles. Those with a strong character do not opt for an easy way out when the pressure is on to compromise. They are dependable when entrusted with a task and have the willpower to reach the goals they have set for themselves.

Character is independent of age, status, or temperament. A small child may be more honest than a compromising adult, and a quiet person more courageous than a loud mouthed leader.

It is said that a person's real character is seen for what it is when there is no one else around. An easy, trouble-free life will do little to shape either one's personality or character.

Resisting temptation makes us spiritually stronger; overcoming difficulties grows our character.

Personality types

Personality indicates that the characteristics that define you are personal. Just as there are things about your body that you cannot change, like the color of your eyes, there are certain traits that will always be a part of your core personality.

And just as there are things about your body that you can change, like the length of your hair, there are certain aspects of your personality that you can work on.

Being aware of the typical weaknesses associated with your personality type can help you:

- avoid common pitfalls of your temperament
- identify areas that could be improved
- realize that you are not the only one struggling with certain imperfections.

Knowing the typical strengths of your personality type can help you:

- recognize and develop your good qualities
- discover hidden potential
- grow spiritually as the Lord uses your abilities to fulfill His Master Plan.

Your unique personality

When categorizing temperaments, the basic personality types commonly referred to are: choleric, sanguine, melancholy and phlegmatic. Concerning the diagram on the next page, note the following:

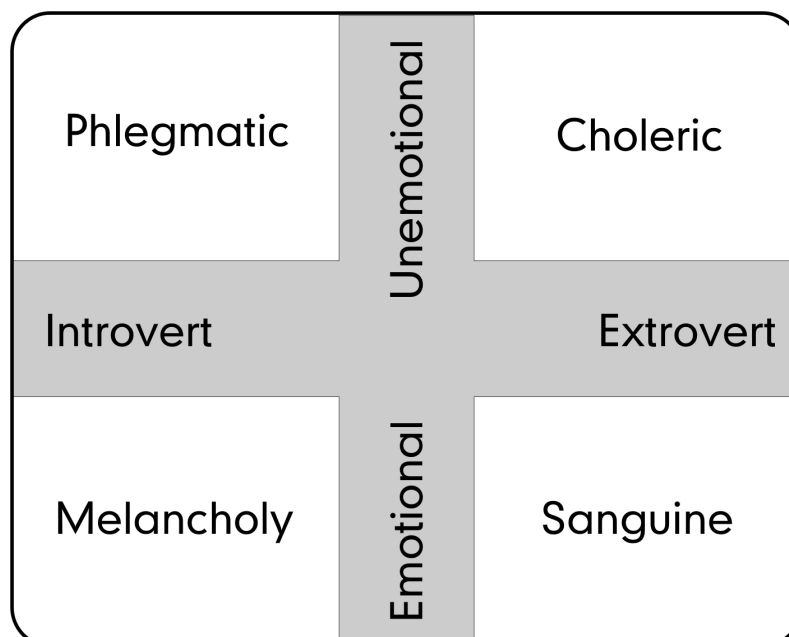

- One usually has one dominant temperament. However, having traits from more than one personality type is quite common and is referred to as a personality blend.
- One does not necessarily display all the characteristics of one's personality quadrant.
- One may have overcome certain weaknesses, which will therefore no longer apply.
- No particular temperament is better than another!

Personality type

This diagram shows how the combination of two personal characteristics forms four basic personality types.

The vertical axis \updownarrow indicates the expressiveness of one's emotions.

The horizontal axis \leftrightarrow indicates where one's focus lies — inside or outside oneself.

Discovering your temperament

There are numerous scientific methods used to determine one's basic personality, the results of which are not always consistent due to one's emotional state while doing the test and one's changing life experiences.

It is not the purpose of this book to cover the subject of personalities in detail. Therefore, a simple method—based on the knowledge of yourself—is used to help you understand your unique make-up.

The method:

1. Mark the circles on the following two pages that coincide with the traits that are usually or regularly visible in your life. Use a pencil to mark the circles so that they can be erased again once you have determined your result.
2. Add up the number of marked circles under each of the four categories. Strengths, as well as weaknesses, point to your specific temperament, so combine the totals of each. Your basic personality is indicated by the personality type with the most marks.
3. For fun, you may want to ask a friend to evaluate your personality and then compare that score with yours.

Note: A particular description may apply to some extent or only under certain conditions, so it is best to think of a number of situations that reinforce or diminish your identity with the description.

Your gifts -virtues of the spirit

Unlike our natural abilities and inherent personality, we were not born with spiritual gifts. We receive our spiritual gifts when we make a commitment to follow Jesus and have the Holy Spirit in us (Ephesians 1:13).

We receive our spiritual gifts
when we make a commitment to follow
Jesus.

As the Holy Spirit comes to live in us, He gives us gifts (spiritual abilities) to use for God's glory and for helping others. Because the Holy Spirit decides which gifts suit His purpose for our lives, we should accept and use the gifts He has given us (Hebrews 2:4).

It is not wrong, though, to desire and even ask for a gift (1 Corinthians 14:1), provided we use it with love and humility.

The gifts of the Spirit

Words differ in their length, meaning, and usage. They are not very useful by themselves, but when strung together in a sentence, they convey a message. Some words are active, while some provide structure. Certain words complement others, while some connect phrases to create a meaningful sentence.

Likewise, there are various gifts of the Spirit, each quite different. Some can be recognized easily, while others go almost unnoticed. Yet each is equally important in God's eyes. What matters is not which gifts you have, but whether you use them faithfully. Remember that having a certain spiritual gift doesn't make us better Christians, and it certainly doesn't make us more important than others.

Romans 12:6-8 The gift of ...

Encouragement – Lifting up those who are discouraged and comforting those who are sad.

Giving – Freely and cheerfully sharing what you have with others and giving generously to God through the offerings at your church.

Leadership – Being able to lead a group to do a specific task or heading up some form of ministry.

Mercy – Caring for the weak and needy who have no way of helping themselves. Mercy can also mean showing forgiveness and kindness to those who do not deserve it.

1 Corinthians 12:8-10 The gift of ...

Wisdom – The ability to make fair judgments; knowing the right thing to do or say in a sensitive or complicated situation.

Knowledge – An understanding of the way God is leading us. It is also the ability to know something that couldn't have been known unless it came from God.

Faith – Having a special trust in God and a confidence that He is able to do what has been asked for in prayer.

Healing – Bringing healing to the sick and disabled through faith in God's healing power.

Miracles – Being used by God to do things that are above human ability and go against the laws of nature.

Prophecy – Receiving a clear message from the Spirit for a person or group of people that helps them in their relationships with God.

Discernment – Knowing whether something is good or bad. It is a special insight given by the Spirit to be able to "see" things in the unseen spiritual realm.

Tongues – Praying in a heavenly language by the power of the Holy Spirit. The prayer may be a special message to God’s people or it may be a private conversation between your spirit and God’s Spirit.

Interpretation – The ability to understand and explain a message from God that has been spoken in tongues.

1 Corinthians 12:28 The gift of ...

Apostleship – Starting a new ministry or Christian group by sharing the good news of Jesus.

Teaching – The ability to share and explain the Word of God in a way that others can understand it.

Helping – Wanting to help with the work of God in a practical way that makes it easier for others who minister.

Administration – An ability to plan, coordinate, and do certain tasks in order for a ministry to run smoothly.

Ephesians 4:11 The gift of ...

Evangelism – Telling others the good news of the Bible and sharing one’s testimony so that people get to know Jesus.

Shepherding – Caring for new believers by gently guiding them until they are strong enough to help others.

1 Peter 4:9-10 The gift of ...

Hospitality – Making others feel welcome and inviting them into one’s circle of friends.

Using your gift/s will energize you spiritually and help you realize you are involved in something significant and lasting.

Discovering your gifts

It is important to know that if you have put your faith in Jesus, you already have at least one spiritual gift. You may not even be aware of the gift, even though you could well be using it in some way already. So, here are a few points to consider as you “dig” for the treasure that lies within you.

Ask the Lord to help you discover your gift so that you can use it the way He planned. Otherwise, it’s like never unwrapping a present to find out what you’ve been given.

Read through the list of gifts on the previous pages again so that you know what they are. Do some gifts draw your attention more than others? Does something inside you connect with the description?

Gifts are usually matched to our personality and ability, like the gift of leadership or administration; though a gift may challenge our natural inclinations. Certain gifts, such as the gift of shepherding, involve other people. Other gifts, such as the gift of helping, are purely hands-on and practical. But don’t worry, your gift will fit in well with the way God has made you.

Are you involved in any aspects of church life or would you like to be? Remember, your gift is mainly used to build up the body of Christ—the church, so that is where you will use it the most (1 Corinthians 14:12). You’re more likely to discover your gift when you’re actively involved rather than waiting for a sign from above. The Lord isn’t going to unwrap your gift for you.

When you think of serving somewhere in God’s kingdom and dream of something you would like to do, what comes to mind?

This could well be your gift, or be closely related to it.

Growing in your gift

“Each one should use whatever gift he has received to serve others, faithfully administering God’s grace in its various forms” 1 Peter 4:10. We grow in our gifts firstly by using them, and secondly by following the guidelines in the Bible. In fact, Paul encourages us to excel in our gifts, especially those that build others up.

Because every member of Christ’s body has a gift and because our gifts are not all the same, we as individuals need each other. Like bricks in a building, we support each other by having a specific place and purpose in God’s living temple.

In Him the whole building is joined together and rises to become a holy temple in the Lord. And in Him you too are being built together to become a dwelling in which God lives by His Spirit.

Ephesians 2:21-22

Your past

In the business world, relevant job experience adds merit to one’s qualifications. Similarly, life experience adds value to our calling in God’s kingdom.

Did you know that God uses all the things that happen in your life to shape and refine your character? God puts His loving hands around your life and molds you the way He wants you to be.

If your heart is soft and teachable, gentle pressure is all that is needed to shape your life. Instead of resisting what the Lord is doing in your life, allow Him to shape you for His purpose.

God didn’t just create you and then put you aside while He carries on with other things. He is completely absorbed in you and keeps His hands on you all the time, shaping you for His perfect purpose.

“Yet, O LORD, You are our Father. We are the clay, You are the potter; we are all the work of Your hand” Isaiah 64:8.

It is important to understand that it is not God who brings pain and temptation into our lives. Everything that has the tendency to drag us down and make us less effective for God comes from the devil. The devil hates God and despises every part of His creation. He tries to destroy all physical and spiritual life—everything that has the potential to glorify God. Yet, because God is all-powerful, He can even use the very things the devil drags into our lives and turn them into good (Romans 8:28).

Hardships strengthen our character and deepen our faith. Peter, in his letter to persecuted Christians, wrote, “These [trials] have come so that your faith—of greater worth than gold, which perishes even though refined by fire—may be proved genuine and may result in praise, glory and honor when Jesus Christ is revealed” 1 Peter 1:7. If an artist were limited to colors such as yellow, light green, and pale blue, he’d find it almost impossible to bring any depth and reality to a painting. But if the artist is given rich colors like crimson, emerald green and royal blue, he is able to add countless shades that give the painting depth. He can also add outlines to sharpen images and mix realistic colors that make the painting come alive. That is what God wants to do with our lives.

Bright, happy colors are great, but if we only live on this shallow plane, we will miss out on the richness that God wants to bring to our lives—experiences that make our lives more beautiful.

Without dark times in our lives, the bright times wouldn’t stand out as highlights. What’s more, it is only as shadows are added that we become aware of the source of light. Each painting that God paints is uniquely different. God is working on your life every day, using bright colors to cheer you on, and darker colors to enrich your life. So don’t be discouraged when things go wrong; when you mess up or when someone hurts you. The Lord knows about every incident and even feels the pain you feel when others mistreat you. He cares about you so much that He'll never allow you to go through a crisis alone. Instead, He draws you closer to Himself through what's happening in your life.

Remember, "The LORD Himself goes before you and will be with you; He will never leave you nor forsake you. Do not be afraid; do not be discouraged" Deuteronomy 31:8.

Remembering the past

Thinking back on God's goodness

As the Israelites traveled through the desert to the Promised Land, God reminded them of the miraculous way He had rescued them from slavery and how He had taken care of them (Deuteronomy 15:15). After wandering for forty years in the desert, when the Israelites were finally ready to enter the Promised Land, God instructed them to build an altar (a pile of rocks) to remember the day He parted the Jordan River so they could cross to the other side.

By keeping a record of the times God did something special in our lives, we are storing up a "pile of memories" that becomes a landmark of His unfailing goodness. Also, looking back at God's faithfulness in the past strengthens our trust that He is able to help us through our present obstacles and provide for our future.

Remembering gives us perspective

Taking time to think about our lives helps us to see the present as a short, but important moment between where we've come from and where we're going. It is like zooming out in order to get a bigger picture of our lives. We can see how far we've come, how high we've climbed, or perhaps how far we've slipped back.

In the last book of the Bible, Jesus appears to John in a vision and gives him a message for each of the seven churches in Asia. One message was for the church in Ephesus, reminding them of the love they had when they first became believers (Revelation 2:4-5). By thinking back to how passionately they had lived for Jesus at first, the believers had a standard—set by themselves—to help them realize how their enthusiasm had faded.

Remembering adds to our experience

Our failures, though we may prefer to forget them, can serve as firsthand experiences that form valuable lessons. After all, we have the ‘before and after’ images stored in our minds.

We remember what led up to the event; we know what went wrong, and we experienced the result. So when we face similar situations, we can use our experience to avoid making the same mistakes.

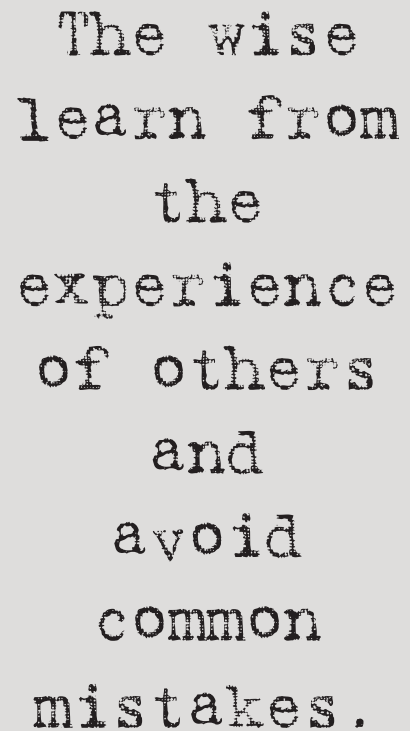

The wise learn from the experience of others and avoid common mistakes. Others take the long route and learn by making the mistakes themselves.

Then there are those who lose out altogether, learning neither from the mistakes of others nor from their own and blunder on through life.

Forget it by looking ahead

While it is good to keep certain memories alive, incidents that have got you stuck are best forgotten: regrets and failures that continue to haunt; harsh words that break you down; wrongs that have been forgiven, and things you can’t undo. These hold you back and keep you from doing your best by living in the victory that Jesus won for us.

The apostle Paul stripped off everything that could weigh him down in his race of faith. He focused only on what lay ahead—his prize:

The wise
learn from the experience of others
and avoid common mistakes.

“Forgetting what is behind and straining toward what is ahead, I press on toward the goal to win the prize for which God has called me heavenward in Christ Jesus” Philipians 3:13-14.

Picture a countryside with lush green grass and shrubbery. This is not what the landscape looked like during the dry season when a devastating fire swept across the valley, leaving a charred wasteland in its wake. But now, spring has brought new life!

The transformation portrays the tragedies and disappointments that come so unexpectedly, when a cruel fire sweeps across our lives, wiping out all that we regard as precious and safe. At such a time, the charred remains seem to leave little hope for the future. Yet in time, as the season of life changes, God sends His rain of blessing and we discover that the things that seemed totally lifeless were only blackened. As our roots soak up God’s love and mercy, new life and color return.

By rewording Paul’s statement to make it a motto, we could declare: Forget what happened in the past; focus on God’s plan for the future.

This renewing of our lives through hardship doesn’t happen automatically. Without God, hurt and loss can make people hardhearted and bitter. Healing can only come as we allow God to soften our hearts and make us sensitive toward Him. This, in turn, requires an attitude of acceptance and forgiveness—something we may need to work on with the help of trusted friends or family, or perhaps a church leader. But above all, renewal comes by God’s grace. Just as nature opens itself up to the life-giving rain and the warmth of the sun, so we must allow God’s healing love to sweep over us and change us.

Forget
what happened in the past;
focus on God's plan for the future.

This poetic passage from Hosea 14:5-6 was a message from the Lord to His people in exile, far from their homeland:

I will be like the dew to Israel; he will blossom like a lily. Like a cedar of Lebanon he will send down his roots; his young shoots will grow. His splendor will be like an olive tree, his fragrance like a cedar of Lebanon.

In the same way, the Lord promises to revive and restore everyone who looks to Him for help and comfort.

Traumatic events

When it comes to the recurring flashbacks brought on by a traumatic incident, it is not as simple as forgetting the past and moving on. Images of the event may be triggered by anything that reminds you of a specific detail of what happened. The trigger may be a sound, a distinct smell, a friend's comment, or a dream.

Sometimes the details are vague because our minds have blocked them out. The numbing of our memory helps us cope with the situation at a superficial level so that our thoughts and energy are focused on surviving the ordeal.

For example, those involved in a serious vehicle accident may not remember the collision or the events shortly thereafter. Once the situation becomes more normal, delayed shock can set in as one's mind slowly recalls the "missing pieces."

People who have experienced a traumatic ordeal should seek professional counseling as soon as possible after the event. This allows the subconscious memories linked with fear and pain to surface in order to deal with them rationally from a position of strength. Trauma counseling helps victims deal with natural fears to prevent these from becoming irrational fears (phobias).

The memory of the event is not the only issue that needs to be addressed. Traumatic incidents affect one's emotions. A person who feels responsible for a tragedy may experience a persistent feeling of guilt or, depending on circumstances, there may be a feeling of sadness and loss. Without the comfort and support of someone who cares, prolonged sadness can lead to a sense of hopelessness and even depression.

Above all, the power and grace of Jesus is able to help us deal with our past and face the future with renewed hope. This is the promise we have from God Himself: "The God of all grace, who called you to His eternal glory in Christ ... will Himself restore you and make you strong, firm and steadfast" 1 Peter 5:10.

A new spirit

The transformation

When you ask Jesus to renew your life, you don't just get a make-over. Jesus puts a new spirit in you and that is how God, who cannot even look at sin, can actually come and live in you through His Spirit. Jesus takes away every single sin and fills you with His goodness: "God made Him who had no sin [Jesus] to be sin for us, so that in Him we might become the righteousness of God" 2 Corinthians 5:21.

Why then do we still have a tendency to do wrong since we have this new spirit from God inside us? (Ezekiel 36:26).

Surely temptation and sin should be a thing of the past. Yet we know only too well that the human factor is still as real as it was before. How can we be perfect in God's eyes when it's obvious that sinless perfection is humanly impossible?

Hebrews 10:14 tells us that through the death of Jesus, we who are saved have already been made perfect forever, even though we are still in the process of being made holy. So while our spirit is perfect the moment we are born again (John 3:6-7), we continue to undergo a transformation of the soul in order that we may become more like Jesus in our everyday lives. “We, who with unveiled faces all reflect the Lord’s glory, are being transformed into His likeness with ever-increasing glory, which comes from the Lord, who is the Spirit” 2 Corinthians 3:18.

When you believe in Jesus and are committed to following Him, your name is written in the Lamb's Book of Life.

This metamorphosis doesn’t happen overnight, nor is it automatic. Our free will is integrally involved in our spiritual growth. In other words, our growth has as much to do with our obedience and attitude as it has with God’s grace in our lives.

Be aware of the part you play in becoming more like Jesus: “Now you must rid yourselves of all such things as these: anger, rage, malice, slander, and filthy language from your lips. Do not lie to each other, since you have taken off your old self with its practices and have put on the new self, which is being renewed in knowledge in the image of its Creator” Colossians 3:8-10.

When you believe in Jesus and commit to following Him, your name is written in the Lamb’s Book of Life (Revelation 3:5). No one can take that away from you! Although sin will always be a part of your fallen nature, the Holy Spirit patiently makes you aware of things that need to change and helps you overcome bad habits. So even though your spirit is perfect and ready to enter God’s presence, your soul—your heart and mind where sin resides—is not. That is why you need to continue asking Jesus to cleanse your heart whenever sin comes between you and God.

John, writing to Christians, says, “My dear children, I write this to you so that you will not sin. But if anybody does sin, we have one who speaks to the Father in our defense—Jesus Christ, the Righteous One” 1 John 2:1.

God has given you the freedom of choice—He will not ‘reprogram’ your mind or block out the bad thoughts you choose to entertain. As long as you live on earth, the choice will always be yours to do what is right or wrong. It is up to you to transform your mind by shaping your thought pattern on the truths of the Bible—not according to the values of this world. “Do not conform any longer to the pattern of this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind” Romans 12:2. God renews your spirit; you are responsible for the renewal of your mind.

A change of heart

A desire to do God’s will

As you renew your mind day by day, your heart will change as well. Instead of craving for the pleasures of the world, your heart will want to do what pleases God. That doesn’t mean having a good time is a thing of the past, and it definitely doesn’t mean that you should stop enjoying life. Remember, the devil tries to rob you of what you really want in life; Jesus intends for you to get all you can out of life. This is what Jesus said: “The thief comes only to steal and kill and destroy; I have come that they may have life, and have it to the full” John 10:10.

When we love the Lord, obedience to Him is not a big issue. It is not a heavy burden we carry around. We do what is right because we want to please Him, not because we religiously live by a set of rules. That is what the Pharisees did, and that’s why they were so miserable. Jesus compared them to whitewashed tombs—beautiful on the outside, but dead on the inside. For us, the joy of our relationship with God makes us want to change: “This is love for God: to obey His commands. And His commands are not burdensome” 1 John 5:3.

We are now serving God in a new and exciting way, guided by the Spirit instead of the written law (Romans 7:6). The Holy Spirit allows us to run freely along the path of right living. “I run in the path of Your commands, for You have set my heart free” Psalm 119:32. It is as though God has taken down the fences and trusts us to stay within the boundaries. The boundaries of God’s principles have been transferred from a written set of rules to our hearts and minds. This is what God promised: “I will put My laws in their hearts, and I will write them on their minds” Hebrews 10:16.

As we read the Bible, the Holy Spirit writes God’s guiding principles on our hearts (the motivation), and our minds (the detail) in order to help us do and say what is right—even in situations where the Bible doesn’t provide specific guidelines.

King of your heart

Although the Holy Spirit lives in your heart, Jesus must be given authority over it. In Revelation 3:20, Jesus says that He stands at the door and knocks. If you open the door, you are giving Him permission to come in and rearrange things in your heart.

Jesus brings order where there is confusion, peace where there is anxiety, love where there is unforgiveness, and acceptance where there is bitterness.

At the same time, some stuff has to go—the trash that’s been piling up for years. Wrong habits you may not even notice anymore must be cleaned out of those dark corners. Yet everything that goes makes space for something new and better, allowing the peace of Jesus to be in charge of your heart (Colossians 3:15).

Temptation, sin and guilt

Temptation

As the glory of God's creation, people are the number one target of the enemy. Because we are created in God's image, the devil tries to break us down through temptation, sickness, and discouragement. He will use whatever is most likely to distract us from being focused on the Lord. One of his schemes is to get us to see and hear wrong things, which he can use to trap us.

The first steps along the path of temptation are usually unavoidable, as your body interacts with the world through your senses. Your mind receives the tempting prompt and must decide what to do—to continue down the path or to stop. Being human, your heart gets involved, and a struggle begins—a battle of heart and mind. When you try to resist the temptation in your own strength, your willpower becomes fatigued and is likely to be overpowered.

However, if the Lord has control of your life, your spirit helps you see the danger up ahead and gives you the wisdom to back away.

Something inside us wants to do what is right, yet we find ourselves falling for things we later regret. If only it were easier to do what is right! As the psalmist said, "Oh, that my ways were steadfast in obeying Your decrees!" Psalm 119:5.

Even the apostle Paul had a constant struggle to break free from the grip that sin had on him. In his spirit, he wanted to do what was right and good, but the law of sin at work in his body (through his senses) was constantly looking for an opportunity to capture his thoughts.

For in my inner being I delight in God's law;
but I see another law at work in the members of my body, waging war against the law of my mind and making me a prisoner of the law of sin at work within my members.

Romans 7:22-23

It seemed to Paul that the law of sin—like the law of gravity—was pulling him down. In his own strength, he could never escape sin's hold on him and so he cried out in frustration, "Who will rescue me from this body of death?" Romans 7:24-25. Then he made this conquering claim, which is our hope as well: "Thanks be to God—through Jesus Christ our Lord!"

Since the devil deceived Eve in the Garden of Eden, he has been using the same tactic of lies and deceit to tempt us (Genesis 3:1-6). Adam and Eve should have stayed away from the tree that God had warned them about. But the idea of the forbidden tree intrigued them and went to go see it. And like a magnet, the closer they got, the stronger the attraction became. Eve saw the fruit on the tree. Then she picked it, ate some, and shared it with Adam. And sin entered the world.

This is what we learn from them: don't hang around places where you are likely to be tempted. Don't keep company with those who are likely to drag you down, and don't expose yourself to things that entice you. Before you know it, you'll be trapped.

"When tempted, no one should say, 'God is tempting me.' For God cannot be tempted by evil, nor does He tempt anyone; but each one is tempted when, by his own evil desire, he is dragged away and enticed. Then, after desire has conceived, it gives birth to sin; and sin, when it is full-grown, gives birth to death" James 1:13-15.

We will continually be confronted by all kinds of temptations, and the devil will keep adapting his strategy to catch us out.

How then can we prepare ourselves to stand firm and not be swept off our feet when temptation catches us off guard? Thank God, we are not powerless.

We can overcome by:

Arming ourselves

God has not called us to a trouble-free, easy-going lifestyle. While we are in the world, we will face many temptations. In John 16:33, Jesus told His disciples to expect nothing less. But He gave us this assurance: “Take heart! I have overcome the world.” As believers, we are in a constant struggle. But our fight is not against people; it is against the unseen forces of darkness. Yet God, in His sovereignty, has provided us with all we need to protect our hearts and overcome the evil around us (Romans 12:21). He has not left us exposed and helpless to face the enemy with bare hands, but has equipped us in every way—literally from head to toe!

“Therefore put on the full armor of God, so that when the day of evil comes, you may be able to stand your ground, and after you have done everything, to stand” Ephesians 6:13. The verses that follow provide a list of spiritual armor that will help us stand our ground:

Stand firm then, with the belt of truth buckled around your waist, with the breastplate of righteousness in place, and with your feet fitted with the readiness that comes from the gospel of peace.

In addition to all this, take up the shield of faith,
with which you can extinguish all the flaming arrows of the evil one. Take the helmet of salvation and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God.

Ephesians 6:14-17

Resisting the devil

“Submit yourselves, then, to God” James 4:7. We can only serve one master—God or the devil. There is no neutral ground. If we belong to God, we must obey Him and serve Him only. That’s what it means to submit.

The second part of the Scripture verse in James 4:7 tells us that when we resist the devil, he will flee from us. All we have to do is to stand firm, and guess who does the running! Remember, God has given us tough armor and a powerful weapon—His Word. And we don’t have to fight in our own strength; we have God’s power, which is given to us through faith (1 Peter 1:5).

Using Scripture

Cars have all the parts they need to serve their purpose. In the same way, God has given us everything we need for living a godly life” 2 Peter 1:3.

If a car is serviced regularly, it is safe and useful. However, a car owner who never services his car could end up regretting it when it’s too late. Similarly, if we neglect our spiritual lives and suddenly face temptation, we will be like a car without brakes, unable to stop. And as we plunge into sin, we end up with hurt and regret.

Just as a car’s brake fluid needs to be filled up, we must keep our minds filled with God’s Word in order to avoid the hazards of life. Jesus was never caught off guard when the devil tempted Him, but opposed (resisted) him every time by using Scripture.

Jesus knew the Old Testament Scriptures and quoted words of Truth to counter the devil’s lies. As we read the Bible, we store up spiritual ammunition in the arsenal of our hearts to use against the devil whenever he attacks. By knowing what the Bible says, we won’t easily be tricked by the devil’s lies. Instead, we can say with confidence, “I have hidden Your word in my heart that I might not sin against You” Psalm 119:11.

Filling our minds with good things

The Bible tells us to think of things that are true, right, pure, lovely and excellent (Philippians 4:8). When our minds are filled with good thoughts, there's no room for bad stuff—the things that pollute our minds and poison our hearts.

The Bible says that, “To the pure, all things are pure, but to those who are corrupted and do not believe, nothing is pure. In fact, both their minds and consciences are corrupted” Titus 1:15.

Forgiveness from God

The Bible tells us that everyone has sinned against God and fallen short of His standard of perfection (Romans 3:23). It's not even as if we were good for part of our lives, or the day we were born. In one of David's prayers, he admits to God that he was already sinful at the time of his birth (Psalm 51:5).

Purity cannot come out of something that is impure, neither can perfection be born from sin. A chicken can not hatch from a rotten egg, even if the external conditions are perfect. We are born sinners; that is why nothing good can come from us unless God changes us on the inside. We do not become sinners the first time we sin; we sin because we are sinners.

Some mistakenly believe that they will make it to heaven because they've lived a good enough life. The apostle Paul believed this before Jesus confronted him on his way to Damascus. Only after Paul's dramatic encounter with the living God did he realize that not even the most religious person is sinless. He later wrote, “Sin entered the world through one man, and death through sin, and in this way death came to all men, because all sinned” Romans 5:12.

Others may admit that they've sinned, but believe they can somehow offset their sin with good deeds. The Bible makes it clear that we can never remove sin from our lives. But there is Someone who can wash away every single sin we've ever committed and has taken our punishment. That person is Jesus.

God wants to forgive you - all you have to do is ask.

Because Jesus died in our place, God says, "Come now, let us reason together. Though your sins are like scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they are red as crimson, they shall be like wool" Isaiah 1:18. God wants to forgive you—all you have to do is ask.

Then there are some who feel so rotten because of what they've done that they wonder whether they could ever be forgiven.

God's Word assures us that the blood of Jesus, God's Son, purifies us from all sin (1 John 1:7). No person is too bad or beyond the reach of God's love and forgiveness. Jesus died for every person so that no one needs to stay separated from God. Instead, we can live for Jesus while on earth, and live with Him in eternity (2 Corinthians 5:14-15).

No matter what you have done, God is more than willing to forgive you if you ask Him to—no strings attached. There is absolutely nothing more you need to do because God delights in being merciful to the undeserving (Micah 7:18).

Forgiveness from others

The first thing you need to do if you've offended someone—or even if you think you have—is to say sorry. It seems pretty obvious, but we often tend to talk around the issue rather than actually saying, "I'm sorry." And the longer it takes to say it, the harder it is to do. When you delay, you allow tension to build up.

You should also do what you can to make things right. In other words, you may need to clean up the mess, fix what is broken, or replace what is lost.

Forgiving others

In the prayer that Jesus taught His disciples, He said, “Forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors” Matthew 6:12. The word ‘as’ is pivotal in this Scripture verse, implying that if the second part of the verse doesn’t happen, the first part can’t happen.

In other words, to receive God’s forgiveness, you must also forgive others. And should you think that it’s easier for God to forgive than it is for you, consider that your sin cost the Father the death of His Son. For us, forgiveness is simply a decision we make.

Forgiving others is not an option: it is a requirement. When we bear grudges and stockpile wrongs for the purpose of revenge, we build a wall between God and ourselves. And so our worship is no longer acceptable to Him (Matthew 5:23-24); and because our sins cannot be forgiven, our prayers are no longer heard (Psalm 66:18). When we don’t forgive, we restrict God’s flow of blessing through us and begin to stagnate. Before long, every part of our lives becomes contaminated by the poison of unforgiveness. The sludge of resentment eventually spills over in the form of anger and causes all our relationships to sour.

The more we replay a hurtful incident in our minds, the more worked up we become. There is only one way to break the destructive cycle: hit the stop button and forgive!

Forgiveness doesn’t mean ...

- that we should necessarily have a warm, loving feeling for the person who hurt us
- that we’ll somehow forget the details of the incident
- that the hurt will disappear immediately.

What forgiveness does mean is ...

- that it must be offered without preconditions or exceptions.

We should forgive even when the person ...

- doesn't apologize
- doesn't realize how much he or she hurt us
- does it again and again (Matthew 18:21-22)
- doesn't deserve it.

Let's be honest, that's not easy! If forgiveness were as easy as saying the words, "I forgive you," like saying, "the sky is blue," it wouldn't be so bad. Somehow, those powerful words of forgiveness seem to choke us up even as we say them.

It takes willpower to break down the protective wall of our emotions and make ourselves vulnerable. It takes determination to wrestle with our sense of right and wrong. It takes courage to face someone when you're not sure of their reaction. But you can do it!

Making it easier

Below are some points that could make it a little easier to forgive:

- Forgiveness does not mean that the wrong that was done to you is suddenly okay. It also does not mean that injustice is somehow swept under the carpet. It is natural that our God-given sense of justice makes us feel it is unfair for someone to be let off the hook. So what happens when we forgive?

The moment we forgive a person, we refer the injustice to a higher Judge—the Lord Himself—who judges all things. Wrong will not go unpunished. God will avenge those who belong to Him, and the Bible makes that clear:

"Do not take revenge, my friends, but leave room for God's wrath, for it is written: 'It is Mine to avenge; I will repay,' says the Lord" Romans 12:19.

But what if that person is a believer or asks for forgiveness?

When the person who wronged you asks to be forgiven, the punishment for the injustice that was done to you is transferred to Jesus (just as your sin was when you asked for forgiveness). Jesus bears the punishment for the wrong that was done to you, unfair as it seems. That is the way God planned it. Sin cannot go unpunished, yet God loves us so much that He doesn't want us to bear the pain. So He sent Jesus to earth to take the punishment for us. Forgiveness goes one step further. It leads to a restored relationship. Do you remember the rebellious son who returned home to his father? And do you remember the welcome he received? (Luke 15:11-24). He wasn't just forgiven; he was taken back and loved as a son. That leads us to the next point:

- Forgiveness is as much an act as it is a decision. Once you have decided to forgive, act on it! An act of kindness, or a complement, breaks the tension and makes it easier to talk about what happened, especially if there's an awkward atmosphere.

Also, being kind to someone who continues to be mean will make him or her feel pretty uncomfortable. Maybe that is why Paul, having told us not to take revenge, goes on to say, "If your enemy is hungry, feed him; if he is thirsty, give him something to drink. In doing this, you will heap burning coals on his head" Romans 12:20.

- We are all different. We see things differently and we react differently. That's why we need to give others room to be themselves—imperfections and all—without taking things personally. "Bear with each other and forgive whatever grievances you may have against one another. Forgive as the Lord forgave you" Colossians 3:13.

Forgiveness should be an attitude that helps us tolerate each other's shortcomings. For the sake of stable, strong relationships, we should be willing to give up our claim to be right. So before you confront someone, ask yourself, "In the long run, does this really matter?"

- Forgiving isn't easy. When you've been hurt, ask Jesus to fill you with His love and help you forgive. You can also tell Him about the struggle inside that keeps reminding you of the incident.

Then go tell the person that you have forgiven them, or write a note if it's easier. Also, let the person know why you feel upset. That act alone can help rebuild the bridge between you and the other person.

Finally, if you find that thoughts and feelings about the incident keep resurfacing, think of doing something symbolic to remind yourself of the day you put it behind you. Then, if the thought pops up again, remember your milestone.

Facts, faith and feelings

Facts—that which the mind receives and stores

From birth, the human mind is eager to gain knowledge—to learn through experience and soak up facts about the world around. A baby puts everything in its mouth to discover what is edible and what is not. A toddler explores the world by touching everything.

And while a girl drives her mom crazy with a barrage of questions, her brother is busy pulling things apart to see what makes them work.

It comes as no surprise, then, that in man's search for God, he wants facts—scientific proof that God exists and undeniable evidence that the Bible is true. How foolish, though, to think that man with his limited understanding could even think of probing God's nature, or question His existence.

Why is it that many find it easy to trust a science book, or a history book, yet doubt the Bible and its claims about the Creator of the universe? The answer is in the Bible itself: "The man without the Spirit does not accept the things that come from the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him, and he cannot understand them, because they [the things of God] are spiritually discerned” 1 Corinthians 2:14.

Faith—that which comes from the spirit

Faith that is based on things we see and experience is not really faith at all. We don't need to exercise our faith in a chair that has been used for years. The fact that it exists is obvious. The odds that it might break are slim. Through experience, we learn to trust things that are tangible and reliable.

But God wants us to believe in Him even though we cannot see Him, and trust Him even though we cannot see the future: “Now faith is being sure of what we hope for and certain of what we do not see” Hebrews 11:1. This kind of faith comes from the spirit within us. It is only as we believe the Bible that the truths therein “become” facts in our minds.

Note that:

- Facts remain facts, whether you believe them or not.
- Faith is believing facts, whether you can prove them or not.

Facts
remain
facts whether you believe them or not.
Faith is believing facts
whether you can prove them or not.

Feelings—that which is sensed by the soul

Where do our feelings fit in as we grapple with the everyday issues of life?

We can allow our feelings to form a bridge between facts and faith, or a barrier. Love is an example of a bridge that can span the gap between the seen and the unseen because love reinforces trust, and trust in God is faith (1 Peter 1:8).

One area that many Christians struggle with is an assurance that they are genuinely saved; the other is knowing God's will at a particular point in their lives.

We should realize that our feelings are not a dependable indicator of our spiritual standing with God, or a reliable pointer when making spiritual decisions. This leaves us with facts and faith as the two unmovable pillars in our relationship with God.

Assurance of salvation

While at the crossroads of making a decision to follow Jesus, feelings can play a significant role. A feeling of guilt (conviction) may lead some people to repentance. Fear of eternity in hell may give others the courage to make a commitment. Even a sense of failure, loneliness and abandonment, may help someone find true love and acceptance in Jesus.

In a way, these feelings accompany us to the cross; but once there, we need to take the last steps by faith and bow before Jesus as an act of the will—that is, by making a deliberate decision.

Sometimes, as the Holy Spirit renews people on the inside, an almost instant exchange of feelings takes place. Guilt and anger are washed away, and a tide of peace and joy rush in. But the emotional rush cannot remain at a high forever. Feelings subside, and when they do, our faith needs to stand out above the daily ebb and flow of emotions.

It is not uncommon for those who have made a commitment to Christ to start having doubts. As time goes by, their simple act of faith may become ever distant and virtually insignificant.

Or perhaps because of an ongoing weakness, some Christians may question whether their lives are any different from those of their unsaved friends.

If you have doubts like these, turn to God’s book of truth and remind yourself that “it is by grace you have been saved, through faith—and this not from yourselves, it is the gift of God” Ephesians 2:8. It’s not your own goodness that saves you, but Christ’s holiness in you that makes you acceptable to God. Your worthiness is not even dependent on the amount of faith you have because even that is a blessing from God (Romans 12:3). You are saved by God’s grace, and by your positive response to His grace.

Seeds of doubt can also take root if you get caught up in discussions about worldly philosophies and religions. By all means, be ready to speak out for what you believe, but avoid getting sucked into idle conversations with those who don’t follow the ways of the Bible. Their ideologies and arguments may sound reasonable on the surface, but they hold no value since they are based on speculations and perceptions, not truth. This is what Paul wrote to a young Christian: “Timothy, guard what has been entrusted to your care. Turn away from godless chatter and the opposing ideas of what is falsely called knowledge, which some have professed and in so doing have wandered from the faith” 1 Timothy 6:20-21.

Evidence of a changed life is summed up by these three Scripture verses from John’s first letter:

- Belief in Jesus, God’s Son, our Savior. “Everyone who believes that Jesus is the Christ is born of God” 1 John 5:1.
- Obedience to Jesus. “Those who obey His commands live in Him, and He in them” 1 John 3:24.
- Love for others. “We know that we have passed from death to life, because we love our brothers” 1 John 3:14.

Many Christians go through a crisis of faith at some stage—a time when they question the very foundation of their faith. In times like these, it is comforting to know that it’s not a matter of us holding on to Jesus, but Jesus’ powerful hands holding on to us. Jesus said, “My sheep listen to My voice; I know them, and they follow Me. I give them eternal life, and they shall never perish; no one can snatch them out of My hand” John 10:27-28.

Consider the example of Peter, a well-known disciple. As Jesus neared the time of His arrest and crucifixion, He knew that Peter was heading for a crisis of faith. So He prepared Peter and prayed for him. “Simon, Simon, Satan has asked to sift you as wheat. But I have prayed for you, Simon, that your faith may not fail. And when you have turned back, strengthen your brothers” Luke 22:31-32. Jesus knew beforehand that Peter would crack under pressure. He even shared some details of Peter’s denial... and that night, it happened! Peter denied knowing Jesus, even cursed, and disowned the Son of God with whom he had walked and talked for the past three years (Luke 22:54-61).

After His crucifixion and resurrection, Jesus met up with Peter and used the same challenging words He’d used a few years earlier at the Sea of Galilee: “Follow Me!” John 21:15-19. Jesus had prayed for Peter before his time of testing; and afterward, having found him, entrusted him with a special task. Jesus also prayed for the other disciples... and He also prayed for you! Jesus said to the Father, “My prayer is not for them alone. I pray also for those who will believe in Me through their message” John 17:20.

Now, two thousand years later, Jesus is sitting next to the Father, talking to Him about you by name (Romans 8:34).

He pleads to God on your behalf through every hardship you face. And if your faith does crumble and you let Him down, it is not the end! Jesus loves you too much to let you go: “If we are faithless, He will remain faithful, for He cannot disown Himself” 2 Timothy 2:13. We are in Him and He is in us—now and forever! (John 14:20).

Guidance

Choices are unavoidable. Along the path of life, we encounter many forks in the road, and sometimes even an intersection of choices with no chance of turning back. Where to now?

When a decision can be delayed, it allows us to see the options more clearly. Yet all too often, the diversion is unexpected and there's an urgency to choose a certain direction and press on. Though the choices may be clear, where each path leads is always less certain.

Besides the variety of options—each with different factors to consider—for a Christian, there is an added dimension to bear in mind: God's will. This dimension helps us make choices that leave no regrets, because the wisdom to make those choices comes from God, who knows the future. To be practical, though, we should look at real-life examples from the Bible. Take someone like Paul; how did he discover God's will at various points in his life?

- God allowed Paul to use his mind to consider the advice of his friends.

It was a group in the Church at Antioch who sensed the Holy Spirit selecting Paul for a special mission. Paul listened, thought about it, and left with Barnabas on their first missionary journey (Acts 13:2-3). Yet Paul did not always take the advice of others. At one point when he was warned not to go to Jerusalem because of the persecution there, he went anyway, willing to face what awaited him (Acts 21:10-15). God has given us a mind with which to reason and weigh up the advice we get.

- God prompted Paul's spirit through the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

At times, the Holy Spirit stopped Paul from going to a certain place; at other times, he was directed through dreams (Acts 16:6-9). We have the same Holy Spirit who guides our hearts when we are sensitive to His leading. He also speaks to us through the Bible, guiding us to relevant parts and confirming His message to us. By faith, God's written Word becomes His living Word for our situation.

- God placed a passion in Paul's heart to reach an unsaved world. Paul's desire was to preach in Rome, but his dream only became a reality toward the end of his life. The flame in Paul's heart was kept alive by a deep longing God had placed there (Romans 1:15). Eventually, unable to contain his emotions, Paul sent a letter to those in Rome in which he expressed his eagerness to see them. The Lord places a passion in our hearts too and waits to see how we respond. Does the desire of our hearts mirror God's heart?

- God used circumstances to direct the way Paul needed to go. At times, circumstances slowed Paul down or made him change his course (Romans 1:13). Because of commitments, obstacles, and imprisonment, Paul's dream of preaching in Rome was delayed until the closing years of his life (Acts 28:16, 30-31).

Circumstances are probably the most obvious signs to recognize, yet circumstances in themselves should not always be seen as direct signs from God, as they also form part of everyday life.

God used various ways to guide Paul throughout his life. If you are serious about knowing God's leading and direction, He will also make sure that you don't take a wrong turn. There is no set formula for determining God's will, though, because He does not lead us according to a fixed pattern. Our part is to be obedient—even in small things; to spend time alone with God, and to grow in every area of our lives.

Worship

God created people to have fellowship with Him—to enjoy a close friendship with Him and glorify Him. That is the essence of worship. We worship God by offering Him all we are, all we have, and all we do.

Nature can display God’s awesome creativity. Birds can sing and even the trees can rustle their leaves (Isaiah 55:12), but in all of creation, only humans have the ability to worship God.

In the Old Testament, God instructed people to love Him with all the energy and passion of body and soul: “Love the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your strength” Deuteronomy 6:5. God wants our adoration, not just our affection.

God wants
our adoration, not just our affection.

Our love for Him must shape our lives. That is why this is the first commandment, and the commandment on which all the others are based (Matthew 22:38-40).

Worship involves our spirits

Worship in the Old Testament centered mainly on an outward expression of an inward faith. In obedience to the Lord and by faith, His people followed the required form of worship that was mainly associated with the tabernacle, and later, the temple.

When Jesus came to earth, He unveiled a new dimension of worship. Speaking to a woman at a well in Samaria, He told her of a lasting gift He could give her: “Everyone who drinks this water will be thirsty again, but whoever drinks the water I give him will never thirst. Indeed, the water I give him will become in him a spring of water welling up to eternal life” John 4:13-14. Jesus was referring to the Holy Spirit whom He would send from heaven. This event was prophesied in the Old Testament and became a reality when the Holy Spirit filled every believer (prophesied in Joel 2:28 and fulfilled in Acts 2:17).

Thinking that Jesus was a prophet, the woman evaded Jesus' statement about her lifestyle by raising an age-old dispute regarding the right place to worship: was it on the nearby mountain or in Jerusalem?

Jesus replied, "Believe Me, woman, a time is coming when you will worship the Father neither on this mountain nor in Jerusalem. God is spirit, and His worshipers must worship in spirit and in truth" John 4:21, 24.

When Jesus saves us, He sends the Holy Spirit into our hearts and we become God's temple—the dwelling place of the Holy Spirit (Ephesians 2:21-22). Our spirits, which were once dead, immediately become the spring of life that Jesus spoke about—a fountain of adoration and praise bubbling from a pure heart.

When we worship God, who is Spirit, there is only one source from which true and acceptable worship can flow—our spirits.

Worship involves our souls

The soul is literally at the center of worship, combining the body and spirit in adoration of the Lord.

When a woman who had lived a sinful life ...
learned that Jesus was eating at the Pharisee's house, she brought an alabaster jar of perfume, and as she stood behind Him at His feet weeping, she began to wet His feet with her tears. Then she wiped them with her hair, kissed them and poured perfume on them.

Luke 7:37-38

This woman's act of worship began with a desire in her spirit to see Jesus, and so she looked for an opportunity to meet Him.

Worship requires effort on our part. When we genuinely seek the Lord, He reveals Himself to us: "You will seek Me and find Me when you seek Me with all your heart" Jeremiah 29:13.

When the woman found out where Jesus was, she went to fetch her expensive jar of perfume and sneaked into the stranger's house. Her will and emotions had overcome her natural hesitation.

For others with whom Jesus had had an encounter, life simply went on. This woman took the risk of being humiliated in front of strangers—men who despised her. Her determined heart brought her to the feet of Jesus, where emotions of love, regret about her past, and gratitude welled up and overflowed as tears. She humbly wiped Jesus' feet with her hair and kissed them; then poured out her most precious possession on them. That is worship.

Others standing around were quick to criticize her. Their logical reasoning saw her actions as a 'waste.' But Jesus commended the woman and said, "She has done a beautiful thing to Me" (Matthew 26:10). If rational thinking gets in the way, it is best left outside so that our heart can express worship the way it chooses.

Worship requires our free will—it cannot be forced or faked. If it is, it becomes hypocrisy.

Without love, we miss the meaning of worship. Yet even if we don't feel particularly close to God, we can still worship Him in a meaningful way by letting our will take the lead. When we take the first step and draw near to Him, He will draw near to us (James 4:8).

Worship involves our bodies

During worship, our bodies engage in the outward expression of our inward connection to God. It may be through song, creative movement, prayer, acts of service, or the giving of gifts. By means of these and other forms of worship, we offer our bodies as a living sacrifice, holy and pleasing to God. Though expressed by our physical bodies, these are spiritual acts of worship (Romans 12:1).

When we worship, our bodies become part of the offering (gift) we lay before the Lord. And as with any sacrifice, the offering must be perfect, which means our bodies must be holy (set apart) and pleasing to Him.

Worship requires effort

Our body, soul, and spirit must unite in worship. If the body resists because it is lazy, the spirit cannot be taken where it longs to be. If the spirit is unwilling to worship, the body merely performs a meaningless ritual. If the soul is unenthusiastic, or distracted by worldly thoughts, worship is restrained.

An example of the effort of worship is found in the beginning of the New Testament where Magi (wise men) traveled a great distance from an eastern country to Jerusalem in search of the newly born King—Jesus. They had seen an unusually bright star, and, convinced in their spirits that it was worth the trip, they loaded up their camels and set off on their journey. They believed the star was a sign that a great king had been born, and so, by faith, they followed the star as it moved across the night sky.

When they eventually got to Jerusalem, they asked, “Where is the one who has been born King of the Jews? We saw His star in the east and have come to worship Him” Matthew 2:2.

But the people in Jerusalem and even the king were unaware of this significant event. Eventually, as the Magi went on their way, they saw the star again and were overjoyed. Even though they were probably travel-weary, their souls were filled with joy; and that joy kept them going until they finally found the place where Jesus was.

“When they entered the house, they saw the child with his mother, Mary. So they bowed down and worshiped him. Then they opened their treasure chests and offered him gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh” Matthew 2:11.

Even in their excitement, the Magi showed profound respect by bowing to Jesus, the child. It was an outward sign of inward submission. Then they offered Him the gifts they had brought, unaware that He was God’s Son, who had come to give them (and us) the greatest gift of all—eternal life with Him.

Their expedition to honor a King turned out to be the journey of a lifetime, well worth the risk they took and the effort they invested.

Our future

The tent we live in

Everyone is on a journey through life—a journey with ups and downs, joys and sorrows, storms and sunshine. We are as vulnerable as a hiker in a tent; for that is what the body is—a flimsy covering. Nothing on earth lasts forever, including our fragile lives. But the best is yet to come! “Now we know that if the earthly tent we live in is destroyed, we have a building from God, an eternal house in heaven, not built by human hands” 2 Corinthians 5:1. So whatever the situation at present, our hope is not dependent on a better life here on earth, but an unimaginable life for all eternity.

There are two ways to enter the presence of God (in heaven); one is when we die; the other is when Jesus returns to take all believers to be with Him. No one can be sure which will happen first, and no one knows when either will happen. What we can know for sure is where we will spend eternity—in heaven or hell. Every person must make that choice for themselves; and if you have not given your life to Jesus and you would like to, why not do so right now?

Before Jesus returned to heaven, He told His disciples, “In My Father’s house are many rooms; if it were not so, I would have told you. I am going there to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come back and take you to be with Me that you also may be where I am” John 14:2-3. For those who love and follow Jesus, that is the one future event we can be sure of. There is an awesome future for all who believe in Him.

For some, the idea of spending eternity in heaven holds no excitement because of their limited (earthly) understanding of the spiritual realm. Their vague ideas of heaven may include Peter at the pearly gates; angels sitting on clouds playing their harps, or perhaps, God sitting on a huge throne as Judge. As for eternity, people have tried to define it and describe it; but as humans limited by time and space, we simply have no idea. We cannot begin to imagine what God has prepared for those who love Him (1 Corinthians 2:9).

We cannot begin to imagine what God has prepared for those who love Him.

However, looking forward to heaven can only provide hope if we’re certain that we’re actually going to heaven. Some believers may wonder whether they are good enough; others may reason that if sin cannot enter heaven, any unconfessed sin in their hearts may keep them out, too.

First, God does not require us to be sinless. In fact, He knows we cannot be, even once we become Christians. That is why God appointed Jesus as an Advocate to defend us—not to excuse our sin, but to fulfill the requirements of the law on our behalf and take the punishment for our failure. “My dear children, I write this to you so that you will not sin. But if anybody does sin, we have one who speaks to the Father in our defense—Jesus Christ, the Righteous One” 1 John 2:1.

Second, once we believe in Jesus, we have a permanent sign from God inside us—His Holy Spirit. “Having believed, you were marked in Him with a seal, the promised Holy Spirit, who is a deposit guaranteeing our inheritance until the redemption of those who are God’s possession—to the praise of His glory” Ephesians 1:13-14. Once we become believers, we belong to God and our names are written in the Book of Life. While on earth, we will always be stuck with these sinful bodies, but our spirits are made perfect the moment we are born again (Hebrews 10:14).

When we sin, our bodies are stained and our hearts are tainted, but our spirits remain pure. That is why only our bodies need to be made new when Jesus returns.

In other words, our entrance into heaven is not dependent on how good we are, but that we believe in Jesus, who said, “I am the way and the truth and the life. No one comes to the Father except through Me” John 14:6. And for those still feeling the need to do something to earn salvation, the message is clear: “For it is by grace you have been saved, through faith—and this not from yourselves, it is the gift of God—not by works, so that no one can boast” Ephesians 2:8-9.

A new body

What happens to your body when your spirit goes to heaven? If you’re not sure, you are not alone.

The New Testament Christians in Thessalonica were expecting Jesus to return in their lifetime, but as time went on, some died. Those still alive started to wonder whether they too would die before Jesus came; and if so, whether they would miss out on that glorious event when Jesus returned.

So Paul wrote to them, explaining what would happen:

Brothers, we do not want you to be ignorant about those who fall asleep [die], or to grieve like the rest of men, who have no hope.

For the Lord Himself will come down from heaven, with a loud command, with the voice of the archangel and with the trumpet call of God, and the dead in Christ will rise first. After that, we who are still alive and are left will be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air.

And so we will be with the Lord forever.

1 Thessalonians 4:13-17

Does this mean that believers who have died will only go to heaven when Jesus comes? To understand the order of events, we need to distinguish between the body and the spirit.

A criminal on a cross next to Jesus asked to be remembered when Jesus entered His kingdom. Jesus replied, “I tell you the truth, today you will be with Me in paradise” Luke 23:43. Clearly, Jesus’ statement shows that when a believer dies, he or she enters the presence of Jesus immediately.

This is borne out by Paul, who realized that until he leaves his body (until he dies) he could not go to be with his Savior whom he longed to see (Philippians 1:23-24 and 2 Corinthians 5:1-8).

Jesus spoke about two people—a rich man and Lazarus—who both died. The rich man found himself in a place of torment while Lazarus was carried by angels to a place of bliss. This happened immediately after they died as the rich man wanted Lazarus to go warn his brothers, who were still alive (Luke 16:19-31).

Then there was Stephen, who saw Jesus standing at the right side of God as he was being stoned to death, and prayed that the Lord would receive his spirit (Acts 7:55-56, 59).

In death, the spirit is separated from the body: the spirit of the believer goes to be with the Lord while the body remains on earth. Our bodies, which have been corrupted by sin, cannot enter the spiritual kingdom of God (1 Corinthians 15:50).

But that's not where it ends. God's plan is to reunite our body and spirit:

Listen, I tell you a mystery: We will not all sleep [die], but we will all be changed—in a flash, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. For the trumpet will sound, the dead will be raised imperishable, and we will be changed. For the perishable must clothe itself with the imperishable, and the mortal with immortality.

1 Corinthians 15:51-53

Wow, what a mouthful! Paul is saying that when Jesus comes back, believers who have died, and those who are still alive, will rise to meet Him in the clouds—not as spirits, but in our glorified (changed) bodies. Our new bodies won't only be everlasting, they will be pure! We will never sin again, which means no more crying, no more pain, no more sadness, and no more death (Revelation 21:4).

Why would God want to raise our old bodies and make them new instead of just giving us brand-new bodies? At the beginning of this book, we saw that God formed your body the way He wanted you to be. He hasn't changed His mind. His design was perfect, yet sin caused an inherent flaw in our bodies.

Each cell in your body has a DNA structure containing all the information needed to create another you. So, technically, God could create your new body from a single cell. (That's the way you came to be in the first place). However, God can recreate your body however He chooses; we simply need to believe His Word.

This new body will be far better than the body you have now—it will be perfect, like the glorious body of Jesus. “Our citizenship is in heaven. And we eagerly await a Savior from there, the Lord Jesus Christ, who, by the power that enables Him to bring everything under His control, will transform our lowly bodies so that they will be like His glorious body” Philippians 3:20-21.

So whenever you are having a bad day; when things aren't working out; when you see injustice all around, and even nature is taking strain, remember that this is not all there is to life—the best is yet to come! If you have given your life to Jesus, your spirit has been redeemed. You have been bought back from the devil and saved from destruction. “And if the Spirit of Him who raised Jesus from the dead is living in you, He who raised Christ from the dead will also give life to your mortal bodies through His Spirit, who lives in you” Romans 8:11.

And when Jesus returns, your body will be released from its vulnerable state. With trouble and turmoil all around, you would surely agree with Paul, who said, “We know that the whole creation has been groaning as in the pains of childbirth right up to the present time. Not only so, but we ourselves, who have the firstfruits of the Spirit, groan inwardly as we wait eagerly for our adoption as sons, the redemption of our bodies” Romans 8:22-23.

Then, at last, you will be whole once again—body, soul, and spirit—filled with pure love, amazing peace, and unimaginable joy (1 Peter 1:9).

A final thought

If you've ever wondered why Jesus doesn't take us straight to heaven when we are born again and so spare us the trials of life, consider the prayer He prayed for His disciples toward the end of His ministry: "My prayer is not that you take them out of the world but that you protect them from the evil one" John 17:15.

Here are some thoughts from God's Word:

- God wants us to grow in grace. "For the grace of God that brings salvation has appeared to all men. It teaches us to say 'No' to ungodliness and worldly passions, and to live self-controlled, upright and godly lives in this present age, while we wait for the blessed hope—the glorious appearing of our great God and Savior, Jesus Christ" Titus 2:11-13.
- God is patient and wants us to tell others about Him. "The Lord is not slow in keeping His promise, as some understand slowness. He is patient with you, not wanting anyone to perish, but everyone to come to repentance" 2 Peter 3:9.
- God is giving us the opportunity to store up eternal treasure. "Store up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where moth and rust do not destroy, and where thieves do not break in and steal" Matthew 6:20.
- God wants us to become more like Jesus. "We, who with unveiled faces all reflect the Lord's glory, are being transformed into His likeness with ever-increasing glory, which comes from the Lord, who is the Spirit" 2 Corinthians 3:18.

Use the life you have now to make a difference for eternity!

A prayer of blessing

May your whole spirit, soul and body be kept blameless at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. The one who call you is faithful and He will do it.

1 Thessalonians 5:23-24

Amen.

Putting it together

Here is a simplified version of our complex makeup. However, we cannot distinguish our body, soul, and spirit as separate parts. You are ONE very special person, handmade by God (Psalm 139:13).

Dead or alive

Our bodies—originally designed to live eternally—are spiritually dead because of sin. We are born with a sin nature, and the consequence of sin is that our biological clock starts to count down the years assigned to us from the time we take our first breath. Yet, because Jesus died for our sin, our dead spirit can be made alive; and once it is alive, it is destined to live forever and ever. In this way, part of us—our spirit—already has eternal life and will never die. But the other part—our body—which is sinful will die (decay).

The good news is that you can have eternal life by asking Jesus to forgive you and by making Him Lord of your life. Once you do, He gives you a new heart (Ezekiel 36:26) and comes to live in your spirit, which He has made pure: “But if Christ is in you, your body is dead because of sin, yet your spirit is alive because of righteousness” Romans 8:10.
